

Building a custom home for the first time can be overwhelming and confusing. There are so many custom home builders, all with beautiful model homes that are perfectly decorated. How do you choose the one that's best for you and your family? Frankly, it's daunting. When my husband and I first started the custom home building process, we had no clue as to what we were doing. Even after you choose your builder there are so many decisions that must be made, building issues that must be addressed, and designs that must be selected. It is critical that you have someone looking out for you and your interests.

Luckily for us, we had Brittney to guide us. Looking back on our journey it was clear that Brittney truly was our advocate. She checks all the key boxes you need in an advocate; she's extremely knowledgeable of the home building process, she understands the financial aspects, she easily connects with the customer and understands what the customer is going through. She's honest, empathetic and understands how important it is to set expectations and most importantly she understands what "doing the right thing" means.

Brittney is able to efficiently and professionally help inexperienced customers navigate through the numerous custom home building challenges. We trusted her judgment from architectural ideas to design and everything in between. Brittney was extremely patient with us as we pondered the numerous decisions. She pointed things out to us that would enhance or detract from the final product. There were occasions when things didn't go as planned and she always stepped up to work with the builder on our behalf.

If you are entertaining the thought of building a custom home, we recommend you have an advocate and we highly recommend Brittney. She will not disappoint.
