

What We Do

Caring Gamers, Inc. is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization that provides therapeutic recreation in the form of gaming entertainment for kids with cancer or other diseases.

- We provide complete gaming set-ups and training to kids undergoing cancer treatment in an effort to provide these courageous kids and their families some distraction and relief from their current situation.
- We offer traditional, kid-friendly family video games, as well as educational games.
- All services are free of charge.

Who We Are

My two teen sons and I started this organization because we believe kids deserve a chance to be themselves, helping to restore some sense of normalcy and fun in their lives.

Our philosophy is that kids find joy when they can play, and gamers (like my two sons, Oliver and Cooper) have the power to help. Through gaming, kids can explore worlds, connect with others, express creativity, and most importantly - simply have fun.

We travel to provide our services to those in need throughout the entire Bay area, from provider facilities to homes to wherever someone needing our services is located.

Way too often, children and their families face having to access cancer care inside hospitals, at an outpatient facility, or at home.

Often, the process can be isolating and scary. During treatment, kids lose access to friends, school, and moments that typically define childhood.

Our mission is to change their experience.
