

Giant: The Woman from Ballynahatty

1

The woman from Ballynahatty

Is practicing

kindness again now that the porcellanite is polished she would rather have an enlarged

heart

than a gladiator's shin would rather hear it thumping like Newton's Cradle

during an 8.9 earthquake before landing a little dust storm

particles of the woman from Ballynahatty speckle my double helix (and maybe yours, too) like

glitter so I do not hang up on the telemarketer this time a grey wolf

coming in for a lump of turnip or ox so close I have to wipe the drool off my cheek

when she gives her head a shake.

has always been a skototropic kind of gal, searching long and hard for the dark

upright

skyward

thing

to spring

from this

mound this dust that was never hers to save.

Messel Pit in my stomach

In my abstract shale is a metaphor
the jewel beetle an avatar the Eocene
a mood
you had to make me say it so now we see we're strangers

I'll forget all that when I hear you cry at the volume the pitch for the

doomed

a million
varves
down:
an ant
a bat
a tiny horse with tinier horse

as if for a dog

Ahhhh, it's clear
now we'll never banter quick
like graceful weasels or

s l o w

like turtles

for under the gaze of Chronos in a maar lake
we suffer

the ultimate objectification.

Ugh.
Don't even try to answer I could never forgive the mockery you would make of me
in all your sorry innocence.

Enheduanna

Men
said
men

who wrote of

Gilgamesh
were first
to pen.

But you had receipts

did you
shove mud

in their faces or did you walk

head down

sorry
to be fat
in all the stupid
places

Or was that downward

cast a warning
your head
a battering
ram your name in clay

as if hammered

by the Gods in the Vishnu Basement!

The me
your me

writ proper
-- in gashes!

Morning walk

Every day it's the same turf same hill same three acres no stream no lake no view just a path through trees that are little more than saplings

but that doesn't stop them they talk

smack

like they know something like they're about to spill

350 million years of tea like they're so

tough

not maimed

their tender

parts

not nibbled

their affectations begin to sway:

Is that a Maple or an Archaeopteris towering in

4-friggin-D

tall as a

Sitka from the Cigar!

You laugh at the crazy conceit of cellulose

but when crepuscular rays descend like

teleportation chutes

and a

glacial erratic

glows like an altar

the only things

sacrificed

are the planks in your eyes, and just like that you are a believer!

strange truths land
them in the dingy
with leaks
that won't stop the whole truth

gets an angler fish stomping on their ceiling.

Can you even live without sleep?
In your bed
can you possibly Lie?

About a month after I wrote Truth, the algorithms sent me an interview with Carol Gilligan, and I felt less lonely.

Girls lose their voice and stop telling the truth...the truth they stop telling is what they see about men.

Patriarchy is unnatural.

"Ripple marks" or "fossil ripples" are preserved impressions in rock of the movements of water or wind over sediments which have hardened through a process known as lithification. Many of the ripples preserve the waves from ancient seabeds. What follows here is, to paraphrase Werner Herzog, "a fantasy" of fossil ripples that record the barely perceptible movements of air via human speech. It is "a dream" of rocks as receptacles for last words/final utterances/secrets/ejaculations, past, present, and future.

Fossil Ripples

This slight depression this slot that never reaches the mailbox

 traces the shape of the air your last word made solid -

let's say

"love"

because in the end

only the rock knows what to make of you.

See

 a slipped halo

 an "ahhh"

print

 "wow!" forms

concentric

 circles wider than an

"ow!"

When the shale

Betty's Caryatids

Mom had six load-bearing girls
 we saw some crazy
up there but couldn't see each other
 except in periphery some from behind you never saw us move even when we danced real wild we stayed
straight as arrows still as quarry
 when our sister went missing
 our heads hurt
 so bad but we were
 ALL
 missing
parts for holding parts for calling out it's history now
my flesh-spackled mouth is here to shout
 The Eleusinian Mysteries

Job

Because why should existential dread get all the gigs? Petty emotions work hard, too.

This is what happens when you write a

'til they gather their wits and flee the cell

An email to the boss full of cheerful emojis and helpful litotes will bring the tone cops to the yard quicker than you can cram a

"jk" in the official office orifice

Now the fun really pokes
til your heat signature smokes

This is what happens when the alarm clock rings in a bed full of dreams all antique toys, Byzantine coins, and smilodon noise

You
wear a pink slip under a little black shift Ya' can't wipe the smirk off

Fold (A fable)

The first one knows your teeth and you know hers for you have eaten century eggs together

The second's all about the knees for you've scaled mountains like a pair of Alpine Ibex

The third one centers shoulders - the way They shake at jokes nobody gets but you
and she
and a Sumerian bar fly or two

The fourth feels your blisters
so acutely
she calls them Hadean crystals
in my shoes.

You style the hair of the fifth to look like Faustina the Younger and she never takes your keys away again

The sixth clips your fingernails while you sleep starts a clone
farm with the leavings

The seventh pierces your ears her secrets graft your bones like chairs >

but mostly we are familiar strangers

maybe one knows your heart

don't be alarmed if I grab your wrist

to take your pulse!

Suicide by Synecdoche is murder too

This is the flaw
 you are not

the Angler Fish
 you are not
 the trench wench

You vent
but are not the vent that feeds the worm
You seep
But are not the seep that bears the germ

You are neither
worm, nor germ, just dry your map before it
 bleeds and
 SEE.

Shhhhhhhhhh

 contain what you like are happy
endings here's one Ocean.

Inflicted wounds?

Ptolemy

When Ptolemy mapped the brain of the woman he put the dirt in the center Sagittarius in a sulcus he doubled down for over a thousand years said her glutamates were

Terra Incognita

Amazing how the pulp fiction of her skull sloshes on the

Welp

And so I wrote this thing but now it no longer strums like the harp of the girl in the

No more to warble like a flute from the bone of a cave bear

or pluck like the lyre of a shapeshifting quail.

It will not boom to the gait of a giant or sing like a wren from an American Chestnut

It no longer giggles like Tut at a good
