Dear ICC Application Review Committee,

There are few people I would endorse without hesitation. Mulan Rouge is one of them.

I have known Mulan since 2013, when I first encountered her during my reign as Emperor 38 of the Royal Court of the Golden Spike Empire. Over the course of more than a decade, I have watched her grow, lead, and consistently bring out the best in those around her. I can say with complete confidence that she is one of the most naturally gifted leaders I have ever known.

What strikes me most about Mulan isn't something easily taught. It's the way she makes people feel. Whether you agree with her or not, you leave a conversation with Mulan feeling heard. That's rare. In spaces where strong personalities and differing opinions are the norm, she has a quiet way of steadying the room. Not by demanding attention, but by commanding it. There's a confidence to her that doesn't need to announce itself.

Perhaps more impressive is her ability to bring together people who wouldn't otherwise find common ground. I've seen it firsthand. She doesn't shy away from differing perspectives. She draws them in, finds the thread that connects them, and moves everyone forward. That skill is invaluable in any leadership role, but especially within a system as diverse and far-reaching as the International Court.

The ICC deserves leaders who lead with both strength and grace. Mulan Rouge is exactly that person. I give her my fullest endorsement and my complete confidence.

Sincerely,

Drake Riley from Hell
Emperor 38
