

Talanoa dialogue statement By Hindou Oumarou Ibrahim

For indigenous peoples, “Where are we?” The report of the IPCC on the 1.5 degree give us a new sense of urgency. We are on the half open window for action. Indigenous communities lives, livelihood and cultures are in danger, our identities and our existences are threatened, communities are displaced our youths are become premature adults because they are worried about them future and start thinking for solutions rather than enjoying them young ages.

“Where do we go?” is simple : we need to follow the rhythm of science and the alarm of people, of our peoples. again the IPCC report on 1.5 confirm that we need to reach net zero emissions as soon as possible to fulfil our objective agreed in Paris.
We want to go where there will be no fear for our future!

It will confirm that to the question “how do we get there”? We need to learn from indigenous peoples on how to live in harmony with nature. That means we need more action and more ambition. Parties need to recognize rights and knowledge of indigenous peoples and we need it right now in the Paris Agreement implementation guidelines! If not, my people, as well as all impacted and vulnerable communities will disappear. It is as simple as that.

As our contribution to this Talanoa dialogue to enhance ambition, we will continue living in harmony with nature and we will continue to do this at home. Here, with the indigenous peoples knowledge platform, gender action plan, just transition etc. we want to work with all parties to develop concrete solutions for sustainable natural resources and ecosystems management at all levels. As custodian of the nature, we can help, but we cannot do this alone. Let is work together!
