About Slough Seventh-day Adventist Church

Slough Seventh-day Adventist Church

Statement

Slough Seventh-day Adventist Church do not own neither do we claim to own your personal data. The Data Protection Act (DPA, 2018) and the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR, 2018) both makes it clear that your personal data belongs to you. As you connect with our church services, activities, or outreach initiatives, we may from time-to-time request, collect, process, and store your data in line with UK legislations. This makes Slough SDA church data controllers of the information you provide. It is important to note however that you retain ownership of your data, you have the express right to supply, review or withdraw your consent if you so choose. Our privacy policy also makes it clear that you have the right to be informed about the processing and sharing of any data we hold about you. Slough SDA church takes its responsibility to data collection, processing, and storage seriously and we will continue to review our policies and procedures to maintain this objective.

Personal Data

Personal data refers to any information in an electronic or manual form, that can partly or wholly, directly or indirectly, identify you as an individual. Personal data includes information about your physical, genetic, physiological, mental, economic, social, online or digital identifiers and cultural identity. Slough SDA church reviews the data we collect to ensure information that identifies you directly or that you could be identified indirectly from, is processed and stored securely.

Information such as your race, ethnicity, health, genetics, political views, religious or philosophical belief, sexual identity and biometrics are considered more sensitive and requires higher level of protection. If you have had a criminal conviction, caution or an allegation made against you then that information also requires higher level of protection.

Article 6 lawful basis and article 9 special categories for processing of personal data

For any personal and sensitive information, you provide, it is our responsibility to ensure the data we hold has a lawful basis for processing that personal information. The processing of special categories of personal information are forbidden by law without a lawful basis for doing so.

Explicit consent

- We are legally required to get your explicit consent to collect, process and store your personal data including your special categories of personal data. Specific purposes for which your consent is required are set out below.
- We are legally obligated to inform you of any official/legal or statutory request for your data.

Legitimate interests include processing such personal and sensitive data for the purposes of:

- Providing and enhancing our support services.
- Administration and information delivery
- Dealing with medical needs.
- All other cases: that it is necessary for our legitimate interests which are to provide relief and support to those in need and those most vulnerable, including the protection of children and adults from harm and abuse.

Legitimate activities of our religious (not-for-profit) body and our aims. This category specifies that the processing of your data applies to current and former members of our church community and those that have regular contact with us in connection to our aims and objectives. Consent / permission to share your person data outside of the church community can only be given by you.

Personal data expressly made public by you. It is still our responsibility to ensure that your personal information is processed and stored securely on our systems and erased securely when it is no longer required, or its retention period ends.

Information We Collect

- The right to block and/or object to the processing of your Personal Data
- The right to not be subject to any decision based solely on automated processing of your Personal Data
- In limited circumstances, you may have the right to receive Personal Data in a format that may be transmitted to another entity.

If you have a complaint in relation to the processing of your data carried out under this Privacy Policy, you have the right to lodge a complaint with the Information Commissioner Office (ICO).

You may look to exercise any of these rights by updating your information online (where possible) or by sending a written request to the Church Clerk of Slough SDA Church (contact details below).

Information security

We are always working to protect the personal information that we hold about you, ensuring it remains protected and confidentially accessed by those who manage our systems and or require authorised access.

- We review our information collection, storage and processing practices, including physical security measures, to guard against unauthorised access to systems.
- We restrict access to personal information to authorised officers and volunteers subject to strict confidentiality training and agreement. Officers and those with authorised access may be disciplined and or removed from office if they fail to meet these obligations.

- We use a combination of digital technology and physical procedures to ensure that our paper and computer systems are protected, monitored and are recoverable.
- We only use third party service providers where we are satisfied that they provide adequate security for your personal data and any data we hold.

Compliance and cooperation with regulatory authorities

We regularly review our compliance with our Privacy Policy. If we receive formal written complaints, we will contact the person who made the complaint to follow up. We will work with the ICO to resolve any complaints regarding the transfer of personal data that we cannot resolve with our users directly.

Changes

Our Privacy Policy may change from time to time. Your rights under this Privacy Policy would not be limited by any changes to our Privacy Policy.
