Judge Extends TRO in Single FI Transition Case

Following a hearing this morning, Judge Block has extended his modified April 2, 2025, temporary restraining order (TRO) in the Engesser et. al v. James V. McDonald Class Action litigation.

During the hearing, Plaintiffs order to show cause seeking a preliminary injunction was discussed further. It was agreed that counsel will continue to work together for joint language for a preliminary injunction. Counsel will report by midnight on April 8, 2025 as to their progress on their joint preliminary injunction language. Should there be no joint proposal the Court will schedule a telephone conference to discuss the matter further on April 9, 2025. Until that time, the terms of the TRO will remain in effect.

Notably, the Defendant indicated that it is putting in place a special escalation team for those Personal Assistants (PAs) having difficulty logging their hours online via PPLs website by allowing the submission of a paper timesheet to allow those PAs to get compensated for their hours worked.

Our office will provide you with any updates.
