

Most dispensary owners don't realize this until it's too late:

You are one card swipe away from being shut down.

Visa has already made its position clear — cashless ATM transactions are being actively flagged as violations.

In the last week a massive shutdown of one of the largest ATM networks has resulted in the loss of Cashless ATM processing for cannabis operators across the country.

Over 3,000 dispensary customer accounts across 6 different processors were impacted.

Not “gray area.”

Not “under review.”

A violation.

When an investigator walks into your store and runs a transaction, they instantly know:

- You're using a non-compliant system
- Who sold it to you
- And whether your business misrepresented itself

From there, the process is fast — and brutal.

You risk being placed on the MATCH list.

If that happens:

- No legitimate processor will touch you for up to 5 years
- You are forced into cash-only overnight
- Your business is treated like it committed fraud

Some businesses don't survive that.

This is already happening across the country.

Over the past week alone, thousands of dispensaries lost payment processing with zero warning after a major cashless ATM network was shut down.

No backup.

No time to react.

No revenue.

Here's the mistake most operators make:

They wait until it breaks.

By then, onboarding delays are backed up, options are limited, and they're stuck

Right now, we are onboarding a surge of dispensaries trying to get out of this exact situation — and capacity is tightening.

There are compliant, bank-supported solutions available.

But they are not unlimited.

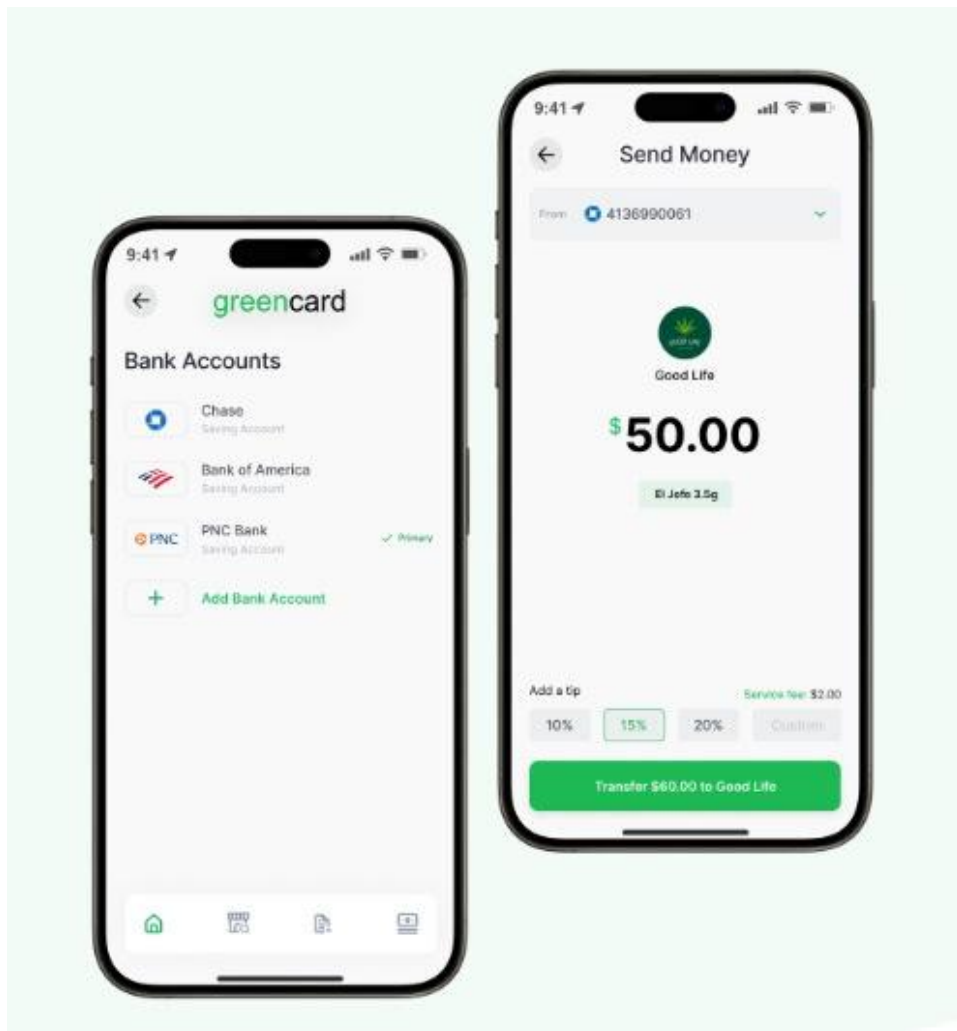

If you want to:

- Eliminate shutdown risk
- Stay off the MATCH list
- Protect your revenue
- And avoid being forced into cash-only

You need to move before you're flagged — not after.

The new standard in Cannabis payments

Let me be direct.

Cashless ATM programs are being scrutinized harder than ever. Processors are getting shut down. Funds are being frozen. Operators are being left exposed. The list keeps growing.

As principal owner, the liability ultimately falls on you.

Why You Should Act Now

We are limiting onboarding during this initial rollout phase.

Priority is being given to operators who want to secure compliant processing before the next disruption hits the market.

Waiting until your current processor has an issue is not a strategy.
