

A Message from Jared Sessum

When I first began this journey toward City Council, I thought I had a pretty good idea of what I was getting into. Boy, was I wrong—I quickly realized I only knew about one percent of what lay ahead.

Throughout this campaign, I experienced both the highs and lows. I met incredible people, formed friendships that I hope will last a lifetime, and learned a great deal—not just about city government, but also about myself. I've grown in how I handle challenges and gained a clearer understanding of how this city functions and the people who help it thrive.

I was fortunate to see the very best in so many people, though I also saw some of the worst. Through it all, I stayed true to my commitment to run a clean, issue-focused campaign—and I believe I delivered on that promise.

I could not have done this without the unwavering support of my loving wife, Jennifer, and our amazing daughter, Reagan. Their encouragement was constant, and their belief in me never wavered. I'm also incredibly thankful for the friends who stood by my side from the moment I filed through the final minutes the polls were open. Your loyalty and support meant the world to me.

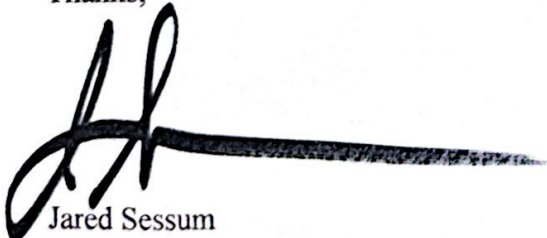

While I was disappointed that our incredible Police Department will not be receiving the new station they so desperately need, I have complete faith in Chief Nelson and his team to make the most of the situation. I remain committed to working toward a solution that the voters of Seabrook can get behind.

To those who voted for me—thank you. To those who didn't—I look forward to earning your trust and respect through my actions and service. Now that the election is behind us, it's time to come together and focus on what truly matters—working together to support and strengthen Seabrook.

I'm grateful for everyone who participated in the democratic process. I look forward to serving our community with transparency, integrity, and dedication.

Let's move forward—united in our commitment to making Seabrook the very best it can be. Now, it's time to get to work.

Thanks,
