Dear Mr. Lardoux:

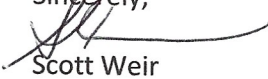

Budget constraints. Product misinformation. Nearly impossible deadlines. It takes a lot nowadays for an architect to survive the daily travails of project design and development. In a world where aesthetics are monetized and budget is king, it can cause you one headache after another to bring a project to fruition in the way you originally envisioned it.

And throughout the complexities of the process, you need a partner who can help you meet the many challenges of building today while satisfying your client's expectations. W.J. Northridge Construction Corp. can provide you with:

- Relevant experience – Our 35 years of field-proven Northridge Know-How means we have the solution-oriented expertise you're looking for across virtually all market sectors.
- Reliable budgets/value engineering – Our budget estimates and product information are based on real-time market-savvy data that's coming from our affiliated companies in carpentry, building supplies, and commercial door products.
- A keen eye to quality and time constraints – We're committed to superior project delivery, just as you are, in spite of the demands of fast track project development.

While the construction business has changed over the years, what hasn't changed is our dedication to delivering comprehensive project management and peace of mind to you and your clients. So, how can we help you?

Sincerely,

Scott Weir

Vice President

P.S. We're ready to take the headache out of your next project and help you survive the development process. Please call me anytime at 631-421-1168 (office) or 631-365-5005 (cell).

And be on the lookout for your Architect Survival Kit No. 2 – coming your way next week!
