The Obama administration illegally spied on Team Trump during and after the campaign as he took the oath of office and for the first 8 months of his administration.

Video/Graphics

Why was Team Trump spied on? Who approved the spying? Good questions.

Video/Graphics

Let's flashback to the summer of 2016. The presidential campaign was in full swing.

Video/Graphics

Team Clinton paid for a dossier of dirt on Team Trump.

Video/Graphics

It was assembled by Christopher Steele, who was once the top British spy in Russia.

John Spiropoulos On Camera

Team Clinton told Steele to look for dirt on any Trump connections to Russia. Coincidentally, Steele was already a paid FBI source on other matters. So, Steele sent his dirty work about the Trump campaign to both the Clinton campaign and the FBI.

The dossier is compilation of a series of reports filed over a period of months. The main focus is Carter Page, a Trump campaign foreign policy advisor.

Video/Graphics	Dossier Report #95 claimed there was “evidence of extensive conspiracy between Trump’s campaign team and the Kremlin.”
Video/Graphics	That Page was an “intermediary” between Russia and the Trump campaign... “in a well-developed conspiracy of cooperation” to help Trump defeat Clinton.
John Spiropoulos In Studio	The FBI and Department of Justice took information from the dossier and put it in a search warrant application. Their request to spy on Carter Page was presented to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court for approval.
Video/Graphics	And as the Inspector General reported to Congress, the dossier was at the heart of the government’s case.
Michael Horowitz Inspector General Department of Justice	MH We concluded that the Steele reporting played a central and essential role in the decision to seek a FISA order.
Video/Graphics	The Inspector General’s reports on Page 126 “The FISA request drew almost entirely from Steele’s reporting in describing the factual basis to establish probable cause to believe that Page was an agent of a foreign power.
John Spiropoulos In Studio	The government’s whole case rested on the dossier’s credibility. The FBI and Department of Justice told the court the information about Carter Page was verified, true and correct. Was it? No.

- Video/Graphics How did a fraudulent document get to the FISA Court? Good question.
- Video/Graphics There's an extensive review process. It involves agents, lawyers and senior officials.
- Video/Graphics Here's a key page in the FISA. Note the title at the top:
- Video/Graphics Verification. Just below the title, it states.
- Video/Graphics I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing information regarding Carter W. Page is true and correct.
- Video/Graphics An FBI Supervisory Special Agent signed statement.
- Video/Graphics But was the information true and correct?
No
- Video/Graphics FBI Director Jim Comey also signed off on the search warrant request. In doing so he too was verifying the information in the FISA was true. Was it? No.
- Video/Graphics At the Justice Department, it was Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates who signed off verifying the FISA information was true. Was it? No. again.
- Video/Graphics The dossier information that was the basis for the FISA Warrant was never corroborated by Christopher Steele, the FBI, the Justice Department or anyone else.
- Video/Graphics It was the FBI's job, as the investigating agency, to verify the dossier.

Video/Graphics	The IG delivers its verdict on Page 383.
IG Report graphic	“The FBI was unable to corroborate any of the ... allegations against Carter Page.
John Spiropoulos In Studio	Any yet, While the dossier was never verified, the FBI and the Department of Justice used it to get FISA a warrant on Carter Page in October 2016 and again in January, April and June of 2017.
Sen. Josh Hawley (R-Missouri)	JH We now know that in October and then 3 times, October 2016 and three times in 2017, these individuals deliberately, knowingly misled the FISA Court. I mean that’s really the nicest way to put it. Basically, they lied to the FISA Court to get a surveillance warrant of an American citizen.
John Spiropoulos In Studio	What the FISA Court was told was a big lie. What the FBI and Justice Department failed to tell the court was even worse. Details on that in our next report. This is JS reporting.
