Free Improv/Story Telling Class

Englewood Creative Arts is offering a free improv/story telling class at the Englewood Art Center, 350 S. McCall Road. It is open to all adults with a focus on Veterans.

What is Improv? It's short for improvisation and is spontaneous ensemble theatre art form where performers make up the plot (or comedy) on the spot. If you enjoy playing, laughing, being part of a group of people but feel shy or intimidated, these techniques could be for you. Especially welcome are Veterans because there might be a need for those who have served to rediscover lighthearted communication and performance skills, but not exclusively. It is open to anyone who wants to have a good time, bring a friend, while being in a safe and supportive atmosphere, and meeting new people. Class sessions are

Tuesdays & Thursdays, 6:30 to 8:30pm, running Tuesday, January 30 through Thursday, February 22nd. The instructor is Karle Murdock. For more details and registration, please contact Jeff Dillon at jeff@englewoodcreativearts.org or call 941•302•8783.
