

7th Annual Columbus Black Theatre Festival 2019 Play Submission
November 1, 2018 to February 28, 2019

The CBTF is a self-producing festival which provides a full-service, supportive platform for you to showcase your original play alongside other professional playwrights and theatre companies. CBTF will cover the cost of the theater/stage and vendor site which leaves you the freedom to concentrate on presenting your play to a theatre audience that appreciates your art. Your cast will have the use of two dressing rooms and the green room. There is plenty of free parking on the site. You will also have the opportunity, if accepted, to raise money for your production.

Each year the Columbus Black Theatre Festival deals with topics that pertain not only to the African American community but society at large and 2019 will be no different.

If you are interested in submitting your play to the 7th Annual Columbus Black Theatre Festival, now is the time. The CBTF will be accepting original plays for consideration from playwrights and theatre companies November 1, 2018 through February 28, 2019. We will select the finalists by March 30, 2019. Winners will be notified by email and announced on our website and social media sites.
