ROOM MAKEOVER

step one:

create project phases

I get it—you want your entire space to be transformed now. We’ve all been spoiled by TV makeovers that come together in just 45 minutes. Focus on one space at a time.

Where do you spend the most time? Is it your living room during the holidays, around the dining table for dinner parties, or your bedroom for rest and relaxation?

Once you’ve chosen your priority space, work through the key elements: seating, tables and surfaces, artwork and decor for the finishing touch. A good designer balances function with charm—so your space isn’t just beautiful, it works for you.

step two:

let stuff go

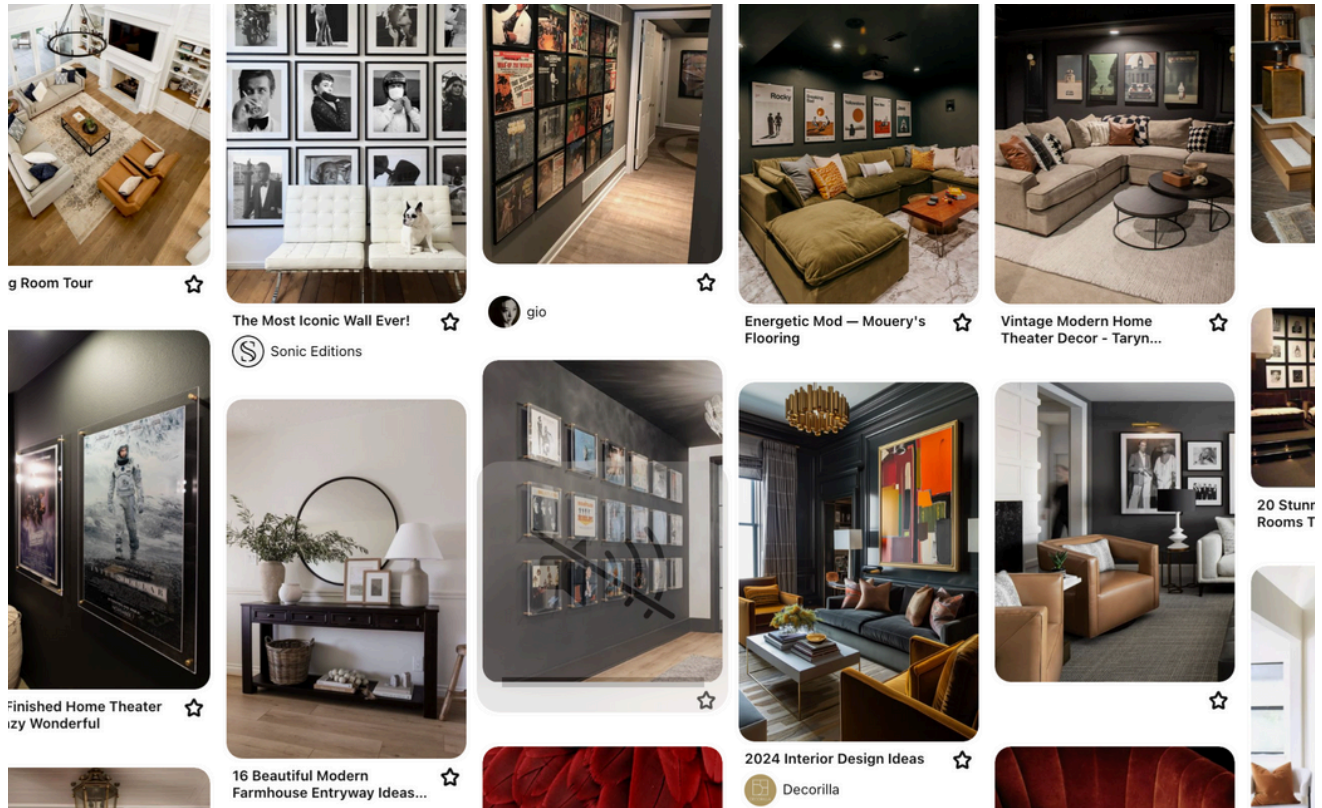

Time to evaluate your furnishings and let some things go bye-bye! Be honest—do you really love that chipped vase you grabbed on clearance five years ago? If not, it's just taking up space. Decluttering outdated or meaningless pieces makes room for the new.

For the items that do hold sentimental value, set them aside at the start of your project. A good designer will find thoughtful ways to incorporate them while keeping your space fresh and intentional!

step three:

create a Pinterest Board

It's time to reimagine your space with visual inspiration. Pinterest is a great tool to search and save ideas—but be careful, design fatigue is real!

Start by creating a board for your space, then search using keywords like room type + color + item or detail. These pins become great conversation starters with your designer. Your designer isn't a magician, but they are an expert at pulling together the best pieces and details from your favorite images to create a space for you.
