Omaha-metro Muralists

Reach out to these artists directly or contact us to facilitate your project. These are muralists we have worked with successfully or know personally to be professional small businesses.

If you want us to facilitate but prefer a different muralist that is not on our list, we are happy to meet with them to discuss their past projects.

If you are interested in hiring an artist who hasn't yet done a mural, LALA can mentor them through the whole process.

A FEW THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT A TYPICAL MURAL

Costs range from $15-$50 per square foot of area to be painted + the artist design fee which is $500-$100 depending on complexity/the artist. Factors for the mural cost are many, if your wall needs to be repaired first, that is not part of the mural process.

1. Complexity of design
2. Aesthetic/style - is it simple, flat, detailed, or rendered?
3. Number of colors
4. Height/need for lift
6. Wall texture/is it flat or highly textured, brick or corrugated?
7. Location - is it difficult to get to?

Omaha-metro Muralists

Here is a breakdown of a typical mural process. Timeline depends on wall size, design complexity, painting style difficulty, and the weather.

1. You choose one artist

OR

You choose up to 5 and get initial designs. Then you choose the one you like the best.

OR

Ask a couple of your favorite muralists if they could collaborate

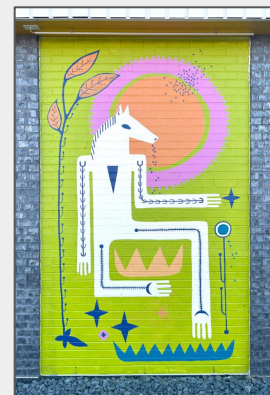

2. The Design(s) - Pay the artist for to 1-3 designs. Depending on the artist, a month is a typical time frame for the first design(s), followed by a couple weeks for revisions. Here in NE, winter is a great time for the design work!

3. Prime the wall (needs to be prepared/fixed as needed prior to this). This could be done while waiting for the designs.

4. Transfer the design to the wall

5. Paint! Temperature needs to be at least 50 degrees for best paint adherence. Here in NE we try to finish up painting by the end of October. Painting can take 2 weeks to 2 months, depending on the factors.

6. Time to enjoy it & celebrate it!

With versatility of style and technique, Josh traverses between acrylic and oil painting, graphic art, murals, and decorative design. His art often employs elements of Art Nouveau, Art Deco, and Surrealism, while thematically exploring dreamlike realms of figures, nature, and symbolism. Josh seeks a sense of balance, harmony, and mystery in his work, while sometimes offering a playful wink to the viewer, inviting them to inquire beyond the surface of things.

Recently, Josh was notably responsible for many of the lighting features, murals and architectural accents of the 2021 restoration of the Benson Theatre in Omaha Nebraska. Josh continues to explore new ways to integrate his varied skill sets on the easel as well as through murals and decorative art created with the help of Laser, CNC, and plasma cutting technology.

INSTAGRAM @anthonydeonbrown

Anthony Deon Brown unites disparate worlds, weaving tapestries where reality and imagination intertwine seamlessly. Brown endeavors to recapture the enchantment of his youth, where solitary moments amidst nature ignited a kaleidoscope of sensation. His palette dances with hues that evoke the vibrant memories of childhood, where every object of nature, and animated visual, held a spellbinding allure.

Brown's artistry extends beyond mere replication; it transcends into the realm of allegory. With deft strokes and keen insight, he imbues his creations with layers of meaning, transforming the mundane into the profound. Brown lives and works in Fremont, NE.

Dan Crane was born and raised in Omaha, Nebraska. He received his BFA in printmaking in 2009 from the Kansas City Art Institute. Since then, he has participated in solo and group visual art exhibitions in and around the Omaha area.

Old sketch book entries, one-off smart phone screen shots, childhood toys, last week's breakfast, all make appearances in my art. The sort of free form design/art approach which mixes rough, gestural, scribbly lines with perfectly vectored, crisp, clean color and shape create a magic that for me proclaims variety, diversity, togetherness, and unity.

In 1992, when my painting mentor, Jim Richard, recommended me to paint at Royal Artists, Inc., a Mardi Gras parade float manufacturer in New Orleans, I had no idea that murals would make up so much of my portfolio.

In addition to my own murals, I have been fortunate to work on many projects with my friends, Richard Harrison and Rebecca Storz, of A Midsummer's Mural, and street artist Hugo Zamorano, especially on the South Omaha Mural Project, with our good friend and local historian, Gary Kastrick. All together, we have painted over twenty public murals since 2011.

We do public/community, private and commercial projects; from realistic representations to pure abstraction.

Paul High Horse is member of the Sicangu (Sičhánǵu) Lakota tribe. Son of a Lakota father and Italian mother, Paul was born in New Jersey; however, at the age of three, his parents moved to the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota so Paul and his siblings could be immersed in their native culture. He lived on the reservation until he left to attend college at Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska, where he earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees.

Paul's artistic philosophy incorporates a modern approach to communicate a rich historical context of the Lakota people. His art captures the symbols, traditions, and values inherent to the Lakota tribe. Paul currently teaches 7-12th grade art at Fort Calhoun Community School in Fort Calhoun, Nebraska, but resides in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Anthony is a native of Omaha, Nebraska. He is a self-taught artist who developed and patterned his art style from comic books. Anthony later studied fine arts when he attended University of Nebraska at Omaha. Art has always been apart of his life. He loves drawing people, illustrations and logos. His recent artwork called "HOPE" went viral and was turned into a mural. He was one of 18 artists selected for Art+Infrastructure project for Metro ORBT utility box murals. His recent projects include a veterans wall mural for Metro Area Transit, an Omaha Summer Arts Festival mural cube dedicated to Ukraine, and a collaboration mural named "Peace Omaha" with Artist Patty Talbert.

“I looked at Dalton Carper’s photo, and I kept wondering what the story was behind this little girl. She is the promise of a new generation of hope, and I just really wanted to do something with it.”

That something was a reworking of the photo into a graphic representation that included what Peña felt when he looked at the image: Zuri holding a sign with “HOPE” rendered in simple letters.

DANY REYES

INSTAGRAM @artistdanyreyes

Dany Reyes is an Omaha-based visual artist influenced by graffiti, pop culture and color theory. Reyes was born in El Salvador San Salvador, raised in Los Angeles and moved to Omaha at 15 years old in the year 2000. Reyes is a self taught artist who works primarily in spray paint and acrylics. He's painted professionally since September 2018. His work is frequently on display at Elva's gallery on Vinton Street in Omaha Nebraska. Reyes grew up on Marvel comic books and cartoons. The bold art styles and expressive characters caught his attention as a shy, immigrant kid learning about this new country. Years later, they still capture his attention as Reyes builds faces out of swaths of color or lets paint splatter across the thick black strokes outlining a pop culture icon. For Reyes, painting is freedom. For a long time he hadn't felt that. After high school he worked blue collar jobs because as a noncitizen, art school didn't seem possible. Then, as a father and husband in his mid-30's, he decided to give it a shot. Since then his commissions have sold well locally and nationally as Reyes continues to build out his studio and develop his style.

Reyes' mural portrays a diverse range of children engaged in impactful and positive activities, symbolizing their collective contributions to the world. "My children were my inspiration behind this mural, and I specifically chose and admired this location because my children go to school right next door, and it directly faces Cochran Park, where they have spent a significant amount of their childhood," said Reyes. The mural hones in on the power of children and their ability to impact the world.
