

United States Partnerships to Combat Antimicrobial-Resistance (AMR)

The Challenge

AMR jeopardizes modern medicine, food security, and environmental health. Antimicrobial resistant pathogens are spreading at an exponential rate and require a continued coordinated effort across One Health domains. Limited resources and an imbalance of perspectives further threaten progress made to date.

The Opportunity

The AMR Strategic Coalition (ASC) is a new, independent organization that leads cross-sector coordination to establish a unified stance on recommended US-based policy positions on AMR. We convene public health, scientific, veterinary, industry, and advocacy organizations to build consensus on strategic priorities and amplify impact across One Health. By ensuring balance in perspectives and establishing shared priorities, our aim is to develop policy postures that are truly synergistic and reflective of our community.

Unifying the AMR Community in the United States with a Single Voice

Our ASC Solutions

We are building a durable, stakeholder-driven coalition to:

Amplify stakeholder voices through sustained collaboration to safeguard hard-won gains and influence future U.S. and global AMR efforts

Support the U.S. government with open and transparent discussions and provide policy solutions developed by stakeholders in human and agricultural sciences

Coordinate discussions that generate consensus-based policy and actionable priorities across sectors

Who We Are

Trusted independent leaders with over 10 years of deep federal policy, facilitation, and scientific experience coordinating AMR efforts. We are experts in leading coalitions and ensuring balanced representation and input to deliver sustained impact to fight AMR.

Our Next Steps

To begin our work for sustained continuity, coordination, and impact, we will:

1. Launch the ASC with a solid strategic and operational framework and publicize heavily
2. Host an initial needs assessment meeting among all member organizations
3. Plan listening sessions and meetings towards completing initial task on providing input into the U.S. National Action Plan on Combating AMR (2025-2030)
