Training may be the difference in protecting an active or retired officer from civil or criminal liability when using deadly force.

Protections of the U.S. Constitution

4th Amendment prohibition of unreasonable search and seizure

- Excessive Force may be 4th Amendment violation resulting in criminal liability
- Tennessee v. Garner, 471 US 1 (1985): The use of deadly force against a fleeing felony must take into consideration the on-going danger presented by the suspect.
- Danger presented by fleeing suspect is important

8th Amendment prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment

- Excessive force on prisoner may be 8th Amendment violation resulting in criminal and/or civil liability

What is "Reasonable"?

- Depends on the facts and circumstances of each particular case including the severity of the crime, the immediate threat to safety of officers and others, whether the suspect is resisting arrest, etc. Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386 (1989)

Ethical Issues in the Use of Force

Every active duty officer and retired officer retains his or her own ethical and moral beliefs. A retired officer may use such beliefs to shape their parameters with regard to use of force within the legal boundaries described in this brochure. Active duty officers must, however, rely on the guidelines set by their department's policy and the law. Their actions will be judged by the "reasonable person" and the "reasonable belief" standards described herein.

Remember: If you use force when not allowed OR use more force than that which is allowed by law, you may be sued, prosecuted and/or fired. You may also be held liable for failure to intervene where use of excessive force occurs in your presence and you fail to take measures to stop it from continuing.
