

Shop Topics Hand Safety (003-T)

Quiz / Test

According to the 2025 State of Handwashing Report, what percentage of U.S. adults admit to not washing their hands at key

What percentage of infectious diseases can be prevented by proper hand hygiene, according to the NFID?

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that hand injuries account for nearly what percentage of all workplace injuries?

Hand injuries in industrial environments that are caused by sharp tools or improper handling of materials fall into which category?

What category of injury occurs when hands are caught between moving parts or heavy objects?

Injuries resulting from contact with hot surfaces, corrosive substances, or electrical hazards are categorized as ____.

What type of hand injury can develop over time due to excessive force, vibration, or poor ergonomics?

What type of gloves is essential for handling sharp objects?

For tasks like welding or working near hot surfaces, what specific type of gloves should be worn?

When handling hazardous substances, workers should wear ____ gloves.

For heavy-duty tasks where hands might be struck, what type of gloves provides appropriate protection?

What safety feature on equipment is designed to prevent accidental contact with moving parts?

What is the purpose of implementing lockout/tagout (LOTO) procedures in an industrial setting?

To avoid getting caught in machinery, what should workers avoid wearing?

Instead of using their hands, what should workers use for tasks like removing debris or adjusting equipment?

A key practice to avoid crush injuries is to keep hands away from ____.

According to the NFID report, what low percentage of people wash their hands after coughing or sneezing?

How does promoting proper handwashing habits benefit the workplace, aside from individual health?

What is the stated purpose of conducting regular safety briefings and hands-on demonstrations?

What three elements are essential for a workplace program aimed at significantly reducing hand injuries?

What portion of people, cited in the source, actively choose not to wash their hands?