Unrestricted View Horror Film Festival 2020

Hello and welcome to our festival of horror.

Thank you for joining us this year where I think you'll find a wonderful mix of styles and visions from an international array of talent to whisk you away into the glorious and sometimes gorious world of horror!

On behalf of the team I want to thank the filmmakers for trusting us with their work, we only wish we could meet you all in person, but, unfortunately the pandemic means we are going virtual. It's been a really tough year for us all and one which I never imagined having to live through. As many of you will know, this crisis has greatly impacted the creative industry, so your support is hugely valued. You are the reason we are here, you give the film talent their reward by enjoying the results of their passionate labours and it's important that we all keep working together to ensure that we don't lose the thing we all love. In a world that feels fractured it's heartwarming to know that we can all unite in our love of film.

I want to finish by saying a massive thanks to Barry Ryan & David Walton at Free@LastTV for their constant support. Also a huge thanks to our friends at London Brewing Company, Coppertop Candles and Fox & Wizard. And as always an enormous thanks to our Judges.

So from me, James, Felicity & Mark,

Take care and stay safe

Tony

Daytime Nightmare

Director: Katrina Grey

UK

85 Minutes

Aspiring actress Lucy finds her life crippled by intense migraines while taking a strong painkillers. The headaches develop into terrifying visions of friends and strangers repeatedly killing her. When her ghostly inner self follows her into the real world, Lucy pops more of pills, desperate to shake it. A doctor attributes her worsening condition to exhaustion, despite a family history of schizophrenia. Lucy endures an endless cycle of murders, every time waking up seconds later. She finds herself in a loop of bizarre hallucinations. Dazed by medication, Lucy realises that she's now living inside her own worst nightmare, her daytime nightmare.

Kindred

Director: David Bryant

UK

80 minutes

Following the brutal murder of his wife and son on Christmas Eve, agoraphobic John fights to cope with life alone. His home has become both a shrine to his lost family and a prison to himself. He now relies on anti-depressants and visits from his psychiatrist to cling on to his sanity.

When strange happenings start to occur during the night, John believes that his family has returned and is trying to contact him – but as events escalate, his mental health worsens, until he nears total psychological collapse.

Just when he needs a friend the most, Bobby appears ... but things are about to turn deadly, as John finally learns the chilling truth about his family's deaths.

Please help us save The Hen & Chickens Theatre

Dear Friends,

Firstly we hope you and yours are safe, well and mainly sane, during this unsettling time. It certainly has given us a moment to reflect on what we believe in, consider important, and where to focus our energies moving forward.

The lockdown has affected so many businesses in our industry, us being one of them. We are determined to keep our lovely theatre afloat until we can open the doors again but we need your help to do so.

The Hen & Chickens Theatre has been, for over 20 years, home to incredible theatre, comedy and filmmaking talent. A place where new writers, directors, actors can stage an exciting play, scratch night or reading. A place where new comedians hone their craft or more established comedians get personal in our 54 seat space as they prepare to tour. A place where, over the past five years, independent filmmakers can showcase their projects at one of our three film festivals a year. It would be heart-breaking for this to be over.

There are two ways you can help us survive:

- 1. You can support this (online) Unrestricted View Horror Film Festival. You can buy the tickets at unrestrictedview.co.uk
- 2. You can make a donation to the theatre via our website at unrestrictedview.co.uk

Your help means everything to us all at the H&C. Thank you!

Much love

Felicity, James & Mark.
