Dear Ms. Owen:

I have been a Desert resident for 12 years. Prior to that, I was a Desert visitor for more than 20 years. I have been a patron of the arts even longer.

When visiting the Desert years ago, I always searched for local theatrical entertainment in order to plan my evenings. My tool of choice for such searches was always The Desert Sun. Unfortunately, my tool of choice has fled the scene and is nowhere to be found. To put it mildly, I am appalled.

Is not part of the mission of any local newspaper to report events of local interest to its readership? Is not support and advancement of Community Theater within the purview of that mission? After all, The Desert Sun's website states that you are committed to "serving the public interest," and that you will "provide community leadership."

Regrettably, I sense a disconnect between your website's stated declarations and reality. Accordingly, I must ask yet another question. How is a visitor to the Desert, or even a resident for that matter, to learn of local theatrical productions? Oh, I almost forgot. The Desert Sun sells advertisements. Some of our members are even your clients.

Could the Desert Sun's desire to generate revenue be a motive for your apathy when it comes to promoting local theater? Is it too much to ask for a "Spotlight on Community Theater" column in Friday's Weekend section? Without local entertainment information, the Weekend section is incomplete and your stated pledge of "serving the public interest" is without merit.

After all, The Desert Sun devotes many pages to TV calendars, TV plot summaries, TV reviews, and photos of TV stars on a weekly basis. Similarly, you publish a plethora of information for movies. Yet, in today's digital world and as recently acknowledged by your decision to discontinue game stories of Southern California sports teams, such information is readily available to anyone with an Internet connection. Not so for local theater!

The Desert Theatre League, of which I am President, endeavors to convey information of local theatrical events via a calendar on our website at deserttheatreleague.org. Though we count more than 30 theater and dance companies among our members, we are not widely known or recognized beyond the local theatrical community. Nevertheless, our member companies benefit the local communities, both economically and culturally.

As a long-time subscriber to The Desert Sun and on behalf of the local theatrical community which the Desert Theatre League represents, I would appreciate the courtesy of a response to the questions I have posed. Also, I would appreciate your acquainting me with The Desert Sun's editorial posture with respect to Community Theater.

Even more, I would welcome fulfillment of your stated website objective of "serving the public interest" by publicizing and promoting local theater.

Sincerely,

Frank P. Berman
President
Desert Theatre League
