

My name is Courtney Lee Roberts, I am an actor in Los Angeles and originally from Solvang, CA. I knew when I was five years old that acting is my greatest passion in life, and have pursued performance in some form ever since. From high school plays to community theatre, I was on stage at every opportunity that I could find. I operated my own business as a Youth Theatre Teacher in the pacific northwest until 2023 before making the decision to fully commit to pursuing a career as an actor in Los Angeles.

I am currently enrolled in weekly scene study classes with Gregory Berger at Berg Studios, and have taken the bootcamp course with Adrian LaTourelle. This studio has taught me a variety of skills to approach acting with intense imagination and creative precision. My previous acting experience is a combination of drama training and physical theatre with studies including mask, clown, mime, viewpoints, and lessons from 20th century acting teachers. My movement background also includes twelve years of dance experience and four martial arts training.

My love for acting started with theatre, but I have found a passion for film through being cast in over a dozen short films, a lead role in a horror feature film, and a series regular role in a web series. Most often, I am cast in the genres of horror, fantasy, thriller, dark comedy, and drama. I am always ready for the opportunity to give a character life through my own artistic lens, and put in my best work as part of a larger creative vision. I am incredibly physical in my work, and put intense detail into each character's physicality and behavior.

I value professionalism, respect, creativity which I integrate both into my preparation work and the energy I bring to set and rehearsal.
