John "Jack" Sandberg as we knew him.

My first memories of Jack was cast when I was to young to drive a car.. My city cousin and I would visit the local airports namely Crystal airport. There was a collection of WWII trainers on an open lot next the Maxwell hanger. I found out that they all belonged to Jack Sandberg.. I started flight training at the Crystal airport in 1959 and became a pilot for Northwest Airlines in 1965. My flight experiences continued to grow and I was invited to fly the WWII aircraft collection of the Planes of Fame East collection at Flying Cloud. Jack Sandberg was an integral part of Mr. Ponds collection. That's when I learned to know and respect the wisdom and be inspired by Jack. Jack was always available to educate, critique and encourage the new pilots at the museum especially me.. Jack was an asset to those who were interested in aviation. On one occasion, I was flying the P-40 from California to Flying cloud when I had a failed magneto at an airport in Colorado. I called Jack and the next day he arrived with the necessary part, repaired the Mag and flew beside me in his Beechcraft Duke to my destination.. Jack was always available to help out wherever we needed him. Jack was knowledgeable beyond belief of the aviation industry and a willing participant and I was inspired by him. Jack was an asset to the Minnesota aviation family and deserves to named in the Minnesota Aviation Hall of Fame..
