MISSION STATEMENT...

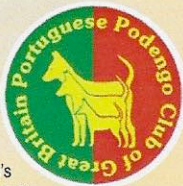

As custodians of the breed, the foremost aim of the Portuguese Podengo Club of Great Britain is to "promote the health and well-being of the breed" and with that in mind, breeders must strive to breed healthy puppies to live happy healthy lives and bring life-long pleasure to their owners.

The Club recommends that its' members who breed, participate in the Kennel Club's Assured Breeders Scheme and to make use of any future health schemes and genetic tests which may become available in the future in order to eradicate known health problems.

The Portuguese Podengo Club of Great Britain supports the Kennel Club Charitable Trust.

Pod Kitchen Recipes...

DOG TENNIS WEIGHT BALLS

This recipe is one for putting weight on an animal quickly, as some use it for putting a couple extra pounds on a show animal prior to the big day, or an animal that may have been ill and needs a weight gain program. Some have reported that this recipe will help with some forms of hair loss, such as when your dog/s blow their coat - to keep the coat healthy and shiny. This recipe is intended to be fed raw.

The quantities below are rolled into the size of a Tennis Ball & will make about 60. Feed around 2-3 per day. You can half or quarter the quantity to suit. Put the mince & all the dry ingredients together in a large washing up bowl for ease of mixing. For best results liquidize the Oil, molasses & eggs together to make it easier to blend with the meat & dry ingredients.

INGREDIENTS

- 10lbs hamburger meat (Cheapest mince available)
- 16oz wheat germ (Can be purchased from most health food stores)
- 16oz oatmeal (uncooked - can be purchased from Health food stores)
- 10 small pkgs unflavored gelatin
- 1 1/4 Cup unflavored molasses (Black Treacle)
- 2lb box cereal (Cornflakes or Special K)
- 1 1/4 Cup vegetable oil
- 10 eggs inc shells
- A pinch of salt
- Add some garlic powder

Mix all ingredients together then roll into the shape of a ball (based on the size of your dog) put into separate freezer bags and freeze, allowing you to use when needed. This puts weight on in a very short time, giving a good shine to the coat. You can use every day or when you wish - can be fed alone or with kibble.

LIVER CAKE

- 1 large pack of Liver
- 1 loaf of cheap Tesco's Value bread
- Water
- Garlic to taste

Place liver & garlic with a drop of water into a blender & liquidize. Add the bread (bit by bit) into a food processor until all are bread crumbs. Mix the 2 together & then Pour into a large foil lined roasting tin & bake at 180-200 degrees for approx 20 mins or until you are sure all are fully baked. Remove from the oven & let cool. Remove the foil & chop into chunks. You can also freeze these until needed. Great for training your dog & new Pup.

SEND IN YOUR FAVOURITE HOME-MADE DOGGIE RECIPES AND WE WILL INCLUDE THEM IN OUR NEXT ISSUE:

PLEASE NOTE: These are general dog recipes if you think your dog may be sensitive to any of the ingredients just leave it out or check suitability with your vet.

Animal Health Trust...

IMPORTANT NEWS

The Kennel Club Genetics Centre (KCGC) at the Animal Health Trust (AHT) has issued an update report highlighting the significant progress the centre has made.

Since being established, in March 2009, the KCGC has focused on helping dog breeders to reduce or eradicate inherited disease from their breeds. This has been achieved through the development and provision of essential tools which minimize the risk of breeding affected puppies.

Cathryn Mellersh, Head of Canine Genetics at the AHT, said: "The creation of the KCGC has been a huge step forward into inherited disease research in dogs. The Centre has helped to focus attention on this important area and without the support of the Kennel Club and all the various breed clubs and individual breeders, we would not have made so much progress."

Five different mutations associated with diseases in 20 breeds of dog have been identified. For all of these mutations, DNA tests have been developed at the AHT. Breeders are now able to find out whether their dog is clear or carries the mutation by supplying DNA to the AHT genetic services laboratory through a simple cheek swab. Thanks to the development of these tests the carrier status of more than 11,000 dogs, in the UK and across the world, has been established.

Caroline Kisko, Kennel Club Communications Director said: "By committing 1.2 million pounds to the Kennel Club Genetics Centre to investigate the mutations responsible for inherited diseases, the Kennel Club

Animal Health Trust

Charitable Trust has helped make big strides towards eradicating inherited diseases across a number of breeds. The Genetics Centre is making excellent progress in helping to enable breeders to ensure that only healthy dogs are used in future breeding plans.

"The funding given by the Charitable Trust is also helping scientists at the Genetics Centre to conduct research into developing wider breeding strategies to improve the general health of dogs and maintain genetic diversity in our pedigree breeds."

As well as individual dogs, whole breeds are also benefiting. The development of estimated breeding values (EBVs) enables whole dog populations to be evaluated for the risk of inherited disease - even if individuals have not been scanned or DNA tested themselves. The Centre currently has EBV projects underway looking at hip and elbow dysplasia in Labrador Retrievers and syringomyelia and mitral valve disease in Cavalier King Charles Spaniels.

Maintenance of genetic diversity is another important issue being addressed by the Centre, one which lies at the heart of the popular Mate Select service recently launched by the Kennel Club on its website.

Sarah Blott, Head of Quantitative Genetics at the AHT, said: "The development of the Mate Select service is an important step forward and, I think, in time its value to dog breeders will become more and more obvious as we create more tools to add to it.

"In terms of breeding solutions, I hope the service will become a one-stop shop for all, enabling dog breeders to ensure, as far as possible, the good health of the puppies they produce."

The KCGC set out to investigate a number of inherited diseases between 2009 and 2013. There is still much for the Centre to achieve. It is currently investigating the genetics of a wide range of inherited conditions, including idiopathic epilepsy in Border Collies and hereditary cataract and progressive retinal atrophy in many breeds, including Siberian Huskies, Miniature Schnauzers and Tibetan Spaniels.

For further information on the progress of the KCGC, dog breeders are encouraged to download the mid-term report for free from either the AHT or Kennel Club websites.
