The 1892 to 1954 classic U.S. commemorative coin series ended with the Booker T. Washington half dollars, issued from 1946 to 1951, and the Washington-Carver half dollar series, struck between 1951 and 1954. Both types honored prominent African-American men, with the former issue seeking "to perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker

T. Washington, and to raise funds to purchase, construct, and maintain memorials to his memory." The authorizing act allowed the Booker T. Washington halves to be struck at the Philadelphia, Denver and San Francisco Mints for a five-year period.

1841 History and the 1841 Large Cent

By Larry Erhart, Vice President PVCC #658

Martin Van Buren is succeeded as President of the United States by William Henry Harrison.

February 1841 was the first known reference to Ground Hog Day.

On February 23, 1841, Attorney General Henry Gilpin, before the Supreme Court, first entered into evidence the papers of The Amistad. John Quincy Adams, former President of the United States and at that time a Congressman from Massachusetts agreed to argue the case for the prisoners. Robert Sherman Baldwin, grandson of Roger Sherman, who had already represented the captives in the lower cases, opened in his place. The Court ruled that they were not criminals, as the U.S. Attorney's Office argued, but rather "unlawfully kidnapped, and forcibly and wrongfully carried on board a certain vessel" and had been taken into slavery illegally.

President William Henry Harrison dies of pneumonia, becoming the first president of the United States to die in office and at one month, the American president with the shortest term served. He is succeeded by Vice President John Tyler, who becomes the tenth president of the United States.

The SS President, commanded by Captain Richard Roberts, was a British passenger liner that was the largest ship in the world when she was commissioned and the first steamship to founder on the transatlantic run when she was lost at sea with all 136 on board in March 1841.

Charles W Morgan, named for its owner, a whaling merchant who ordered its construction from the shipbuilders in New Bedford Massachusetts began its maiden voyage on September 6, 1841, with a journey around Cape Horn and across the Pacific Ocean.

Representing the year 1841, this large cent is a true pioneer-era coin. Engraver Christian Gobrecht is responsible for the Braided Hair large cent design. The obverse design has a braided hair Liberty facing left. The reverse design has a Wreath with "one cent" in the center. The edge is plain. The coin composition is 100% copper and weighs 10.9 grams and is 27.5 millimeters in diameter. It was minted from 1839-1857 with a mintage of 1,597,367. Although common in circulated grades, the 1841 Large Cent becomes quite scarce in uncirculated conditions and very rare as a proof.

Military Payment Certificates - MPCs

Military payment certificates, or MPC, was a form of currency used to pay U.S. military personnel in certain foreign countries. It was used in one area or another from a few months after the end of World War II until a few months after the end of U.S. participation in the Vietnam War – from 1946 until 1973. MPC utilized layers of line lithography to create colorful banknotes that could be produced cheaply. Fifteen series of MPCs were created. However, only 13 series were issued. The remaining two were largely destroyed, although some examples remain. Among the 13 released series a total of 94 notes are recognized.

sometimes attack the nearest U.S. base the next night in retaliation.

History of MPCs MPCs evolved from Allied Military Currency as a response to the large amounts of US Dollars circulated by American servicemen in post-World War II Europe. The local citizens might not trust local currencies, as the future of their governments was unclear. Preferring a stable currency like U.S. dollars, local civilians often accepted payment in dollars for less than the accepted conversion rates. Dollars became more favorable to hold, inflating the local currencies and thwarting plans to stabilize local economies. Contributing to this problem was the fact that troops were being paid in dollars, which they could convert in unlimited amounts to the local currency with merchants at the floating (black market) conversion rate, which was much more favorable to the GIs than the government fixed conversion rate. From this conversion rate imbalance, a black market developed where the servicemen could profit from the more favorable exchange rate.

To reduce profiteering from currency arbitrage, the U.S. military devised the MPC program. MPCs were paper money denominated in amounts of 5 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents, 1 dollar, 5 dollars, 10 dollars, and starting in 1968 20 dollars. MPCs were fully convertible to U.S. dollars upon leaving a designated MPC zone, and convertible to local currencies when going on leave (but not vice versa). It was illegal for unauthorized personnel to possess MPC, and that policy, in theory, eliminated U.S. dollars from local economies. Although actual greenbacks were not circulating, many local merchants accepted MPC on par with US dollars, since they could use them on the black market. This was especially evident during the Vietnam War when the MPC program was at its zenith. To prevent MPC from being used as a primary currency in the host country and destroying the local currency value and economy, MPC banknote styles were frequently changed to deter black marketers and reduce hoarding, as the old style would become worthless. Many veterans can recount a conversion day or C-Day.

C-days in Vietnam were always classified, never pre-announced. On C-day, soldiers would be restricted to base, preventing Gls from helping Vietnamese civilians—especially local bars, brothels, bar girls and other black market people—from converting old MPC to the newer version. Since Vietnamese were not allowed to convert the currency, they frequently lost savings by holding old, worthless MPC. People angry over their MPC loss would

To illustrate the Vietnam War MPC cycle, in mid-1970, a GI could have a friend in the United States mail a $100 bill in standard U.S. currency, take it "downtown" and convert it to $180 MPC, then change the MPC to South Vietnamese piastres at double the legal rate. The soldier could then have a day shopping, bar hopping, or otherwise spending freely, paying in low-cost local currency, and finishing the day with a hefty profit. To continue the black market cycle, that $100 greenback would find its way to high-level Vietnamese government officials, especially the corrupt ones, who could travel out of country, where the U.S. currency could be deposited safely. Rumors also suggested that this hard currency, US dollars, would find its way to North Vietnamese European exchange accounts. Thirteen series of MPC were issued between 1946 and 1973, with varied designs often compared to Monopoly money due to their colors. After the official end of U.S. participation in the Vietnam War in early 1973, the only place where MPC remained in use was South Korea. In autumn of 1973, a surprise conversion day was held there, retiring MPC and substituting greenbacks. MPC was never again issued, and the concept lay dormant until the late 1990s, when it was revived somewhat in the form of a Stored Value Card system, used by U.S. armed forces in Iraq.
