

YOUTH WITH HEARING INVENTION . . . Pat Flanagan, 17, a Bellaire, Texas, High School junior, shows his invention—a device that may revolutionize the hearing-aid industry. Flanagan, who calls his invention the neurophone, claims it transmits sound by radio impulses direct to the brain, bypassing the ear. He said it consists of two insulated electrodes which fit over the temples.

Ke
ha
to tu
tio
E
in me
gre
den
om
gov por
T
a thr
age
son
and
loc
tion
pub

F
bul
far ned
end
unc
wh
mig
not cia
"ba
aw

CAD: Cool

Eddie Fisher
Highlights
See Story, Page 14-A

The Daily Ardmoreite

★ FINAL ★
HOME EDITION

68th Year No. 137

ESTABLISHED OCTOBER 22, 1920

"Southern Oklahoma's Greatest Newspaper" ARDMORE, OKLAHOMA, THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1956

(AP) Telephoto
(AP) Licensed Wire

24 PAGES—PRICE: DAILY 5c

YOUTH WITH HEARING INVENTION . . . Pat Flanagan, 17, a Bellaire, Texas, High School junior, shows his invention—a device that may revolutionize the hearing-aid industry. Flanagan, who calls his invention the neurophone, claims it transmits sound by radio impulses direct to the brain, bypassing the ear. He said it consists of two insulated electrodes which fit over the temples.

Kennedy Seeks

YOUNGEST DEVEL