Dear Bryan,

I am delighted to confirm your admission to Barrett, The Honors College at Arizona State University for the fall 2023 semester. Congratulations on this tremendous achievement!

Carefully review the next steps required to accept your position in the honors college at <https://barretthonors.asu.edu/admissions/next-steps>.

Barrett, The Honors College is a diverse community of high-achieving students within ASU who benefit from the considerable resources of a world-class research university combined with the close, personal attention provided by the best honors college in the nation.

As a Barrett student, you will:

- Engage in a distinctive and flexible honors curriculum featuring small classes and seminar experiences.
- Live for your first two years in the honors residential community on the ASU campus of your academic major (though you may choose to stay on campus all four years for the amenities and convenience!).
- Flourish with the dedicated support of over one hundred caring professionals - our deans, honors faculty fellows, and staff - who work exclusively with Barrett students.
- Learn from the very best ASU professors, including MacArthur Fellows, Nobel Laureates, and Pulitzer Prize winners.
- Receive individualized support through a three-tier advising network featuring your honors academic advisor, the advisor for your major, and a Faculty Honors Advisor in your field.
- Have the opportunity to select from honors-only internships, research, and study abroad programs.

Barrett uniquely prepares you for a wide variety of future pursuits, including enrollment at top graduate and professional schools, positions with prominent nonprofit and Fortune 500 companies, and placement with groups that promote the welfare of others like the Peace Corps and Teach for America.

We also boast a remarkable record in the number of nationally competitive postgraduate fellowships and scholarships won by our students, due in large part to the direct access Barrett students have to the Office of National Scholarships Advisement.

If you have not already done so, be sure to explore the wide variety of informative virtual and in-person visit experiences under the Visit section of our <https://barretthonors.asu.edu/> website.

Welcome to Barrett, The Honors College at Arizona State University. I look forward to having you join our community, and to seeing all the ways that you will thrive here!

Sincerely,

Tara Williams, Ph.D.
