There is not only the continuous evolution of tastes and the seasonal debut of new designers, but also the incessant technological research on materials, which produces: practically every week innovative solutions and new opportunities. New materials that allow not only to obtain original and surprising visual effects, but which can boast mechanical performance and durability that are far superior to those of previous generations.

ENGINEERING

From project concept to engineering, the Know-how and competence in all project development phases has the expertise required to analyses, face and solve the complexities of the various project phases, and to finalize even the most challenging creations.

This is a series of activities to source materials, develop and produce complex construction drawings using CAD 2-3D PDM (Product Data Management) systems, and make prototypes; these activities are carried out with the dedicated contribution of the Operations team, which consists of 20 specialists. During this stage, the corporate know-how is translated into a fine-tuning of materials, details and processes that must satisfy the formal specifications of the plans.

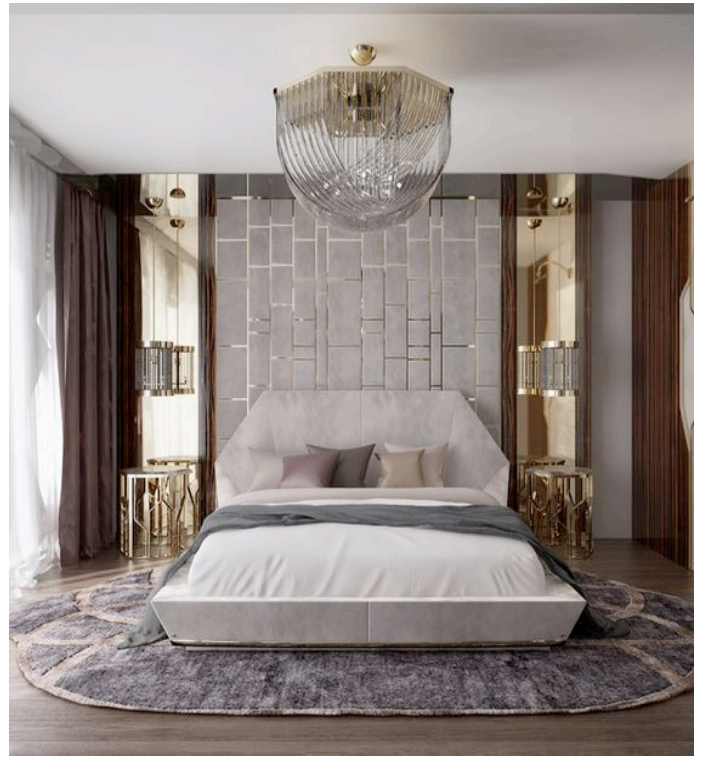

Our goal is to produce new systems of sustainable living that does not lose sight of solidarity and that values diversity.
