

Erica Barker is a Senior Analyst in the Assurance and Advisory Management Program at The Home Depot. In this role, she executes projects across functional areas, including operations, merchandising, and finance, to ensure compliance with internal policies and identify process improvements and cost-out opportunities. She performs risk assessments, process reviews, and complex analyses to develop actionable insights and recommendations for executive leadership.

Prior to joining The Home Depot, Erica served as an Assurance Associate and Senior Assurance Associate at PricewaterhouseCoopers, performing integrated and financial audits for public and private clients across the media and technology sectors. In these roles, she gained experience across consulting engagements, first-year SOX procedures, and business combinations.

Erica earned her Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, with a concentration in Accounting, from The Georgia Institute of Technology. She is a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) in the state of Georgia, earning the Elijah Watt Sells Award for top exam performance. She brings enthusiasm and dedication to her work, developing positive working relationships and driving successful project execution. She also serves in extracurricular roles, such as on The Home Depot's Internship Steering Committee. She continues to pursue challenges and opportunities to elevate her skillset as she progresses in her career.