

Marie Taylor is the Executive Director of Enterprise Risk at NCR Atleos, where she leads global risk strategy and alignment across the enterprise. With nearly 20 years of experience in financial, technology, and enterprise risk, she is passionate about building resilient risk cultures and translating complex risk into strategic action. Marie began her career at Synovus, where she advanced into enterprise risk leadership and helped modernize the ERM program through model development, framework redesign, and board-level engagement. At Global Payments, she built the IT Risk Program and implemented a self-identified risk process to escalate and translate tactical technology risks into strategic enterprise decisions.

At NCR Atleos, Marie established the enterprise risk management program and launched the company's first Enterprise Risk Assessment and Business Impact Assessment initiatives. She developed the risk appetite framework, built a risk liaison network, and introduced escalation pathways for emerging risks. Her work has helped embed risk into strategic decision-making and governance processes across the organization.

She earned her undergraduate degree in Finance from Auburn University and a Master's in Banking from Louisiana State University. Marie holds the CRISC certification and serves on the AI Risk Council at NCR Atleos. She is a frequent speaker on strategic resilience, risk culture, and women in leadership. In 2024, Marie relocated to Atlanta with her husband and four-year-old son.