

As You Grow, Remember This

There's so much to say-I hope this rhyming poem brightens your day.

There's a special place in my heart that's reserved just for you.

Never forget, I'm right by your side in everything you do.

From the moment I saw your sweet little face, my world forever changed-

A flame was lit in both our hearts, a love that can't be rearranged.

I'll always be here, especially when times feel tough.

Just place your hand on your heart-and that will be enough.

You're not so little anymore and need less help each day,

But if the road gets rocky, I'll be there to show the way.

Never settle for less than what you were made to be.

Follow your heart, laugh, cry, and live boldly and free.

Be self-confident, kind, and always choose what's right.

God will give you wings, and you'll soar to amazing height.

You may not always understand the things I choose to do,

But every decision I make is rooted in deep love for you.

God gave you countless gifts-but one of the best you'll find

Is the strength of your heart and your brilliant, thoughtful mind.

You'll need to work hard-the best things take time.

Trust your gut, speak your truth, and reason through every climb.

Never compare your path to anyone else's run-

You've conquered mountains already, and your journey's just begun.

Some days won't be easy-life's road can twist and sway.

But trust in the Lord, and you'll see-it's always worth the wait.

Once you were tiny, with fingers wrapped around my hand,

Now I see a strong, kind, handsome young man.

No matter how big you grow or how far you roam,

I'll always be your proudest fan-your heart is my home.

Love always,

Momma

A Final Thought:

One of the most powerful gifts I can give my boys is to encourage them to grow into who they want to be, while always reminding them how much I love who they already are.