About the Authors

Aesop was a master storyteller in ancient Greece who used humans and personified animals to teach valuable lessons about hard work, honesty, bravery, karma, and much more. Classic stories such as “The Tortoise and the Hare,” “The Goose and the Golden Eggs,” and “The Boy Who Cried Wolf” are part of this updated compilation of witty tales. This book retells, along with spectacular illustrations, thirteen important stories with lessons for all ages.

Uzma Farooq, MD, is a triple board-certified dermatopathologist and artist. She practices medicine in Miami, Florida. She loves to read, and one of her favorite books growing up was an illustrated copy of Aesop’s fables. Samir Ahmad and Amani Ahmad, her sons, helped her write this book with humor and enthusiasm as they learned the lessons themselves along the way.
