Labor Day

Americans celebrated the first Labor Day weekend in 1882. It was conceived by America's labor unions as a testament to their cause. Labor Day became an official national holiday in 1894, after the legislation sanctioning it was shepherded through Congress amid labor unrest. President Cleveland signed the legislation as part of an election-year compromise. America was in the midst of an economic depression in 1894. That year, workers for the Pullman Car Co., one of the country's largest manufacturers, walked off their jobs and went on strike. Hundreds of thousands of workers nationwide joined the walkout. President Cleveland feared the strike would shut down America's railroads, so he dispatched 12,000 federal troops to stop the strike. Violence ensued, and at least thirteen strikers were killed. Cleveland hoped that granting workers a Labor Day holiday would appease them as he sought a third term as president. He signed the holiday into law six days after the end of the strike. Cleveland's efforts failed – he was denied the Democratic nomination in 1896. Politicians and labor leaders were content to keep the holiday, though. Honoring the workers of America is important, but Labor Day also provides Christians an opportunity to celebrate the deeper meaning behind work. For Christians, celebrating Labor Day has multiple meanings. We honor the workers of America, but the holiday is also a chance to remember the importance of work. Why do we work? As you celebrate with your friends and family, take time to reflect on these reasons: Our work should glorify God, serve the common good, and further the kingdom of God. Our work is what God uses to change the world for his glory. The opening lines of Scripture say, "In the beginning, God created." God is a worker. From the very beginning of the Bible, we are faced with the inescapable fact that work is a part of God's character and nature. Vocation is integral, not incidental, to the nature of God. In Genesis 2:15 we read, The LORD God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it. God gave us the task of ruling over and taking care of his creation. This cultural mandate, given in Genesis 1:28, is our original job description. Like God, we have the ability to work, make plans and implement them, and be creative. These gifts help point us to our purpose – humanity was created by God to cultivate and keep God's creation, which includes developing and protecting it. All professions and all kinds of work, assuming that they are legal and biblically ethical, are honorable before the Lord. There is no dichotomy between sacred and secular work. All work brings glory to God and a potential source of fulfillment, if it is done to God's glory. God did not create work to be drudgery. He gave man work before the fall, as a means of fulfillment. Ecclesiastes 2:24-25 reminds us that a human being can do nothing better than find satisfaction in his work. This too is from the hand of God, for without him, who can eat or find enjoyment? You manifest a powerful message, both verbally and non-verbally, of a supernatural approach to work. The world needs this powerful witness to the reality of Christ and the difference he makes in his followers. Genesis 3:19 reminds us that "by the sweat of your face you shall eat bread, till you return to the ground." God intends that humans are to work as long as they live, whether paid or volunteer. Retirement shouldn't mean the end of meaningful, purposeful work. Our vocations are for a lifetime.

Cantate Domino

An elder contemporary of Bach and Handel, Giuseppe Ottavio Pitoni (1657-1743) lived and worked in Rome for most of his life. He held a number of important posts, not least of which was maestro di cappella at St. Peter's Basilica in the Vatican. An extremely prolific composer and theorist, his influence on sacred music in Rome was profound. One of his most popular compositions even today is Cantate Domino, a setting of Psalm 149: "Sing to the Lord a new song."

How Excellent Thy Name, O Lord

Written just three years prior to Messiah, George Frederic Handel's oratorio Saul deals with the first king of Israel and his relationship with his successor, David. The work contains some of the composer's most dramatic choral pieces, of which the opening chorus, "How Excellent" is a fine example.

~A short concert by Carol Williams and Randy Speer will be held after church at 12:15 on the 10th to help raise money to move the piano into the sanctuary.~

My Shepherd Will Supply My Need

American composer and critic Virgil Thomson (1896-1989) is considered instrumental in developing the "American Sound" in music. Peer of the great Aaron Copland, Thomson was also a good friend of Gertrude Stein, and mentor to Leonard Bernstein. Disarmingly simple and effective, Thomson's arrangement of "My Shepherd Will Supply My Need" is a favorite at Court Street, using an adaptation of Psalm 23 by Isaac Watts, and an early American melody "RESIGNATION".

Be Thou My Vision

In his long and distinguished career, Ohio composer and educator Carlton Young edited two revisions of the United Methodist hymnal, including the current one. A powerful arrangement of an ancient Irish folk tune, Young's setting of "Be Thou My Vision" is a perennial Court Street favorite.

Thank you from Madison Heights Elementary School
