DOG DAYS OF SUMMER

Like any kid, when I was young I couldn't wait for school to end and summer to begin. Ah, those long, warm, lazy days! I started counting down to their arrival along about the first of May. By the time the last day of school finally arrived, I could barely make it until that final bell. I am sure you can relate. That amazing feeling of freedom, where you burst forth from the bonds of forced academia and relish the joys of sleeping late, no homework and countless hours with absolutely nothing to do. And that, of course, was the problem. The first week or two were glorious. But by week three or so, boredom started to nibble at my happiness. It wasn't long before I made the fatal mistake of mumbling, "I'm bored; there's nothing to do." My mom seemed to think there were all sorts of things to do, and apparently, she'd just been waiting for someone to volunteer. Does "I'm bored; there's nothing to do" really amount to volunteering? It did in our house. The next thing I knew I found myself in the garden picking butter beans. I would rather pick anything but butter beans. Her litany of chores continued. What had I done? How could I not have remembered the previous summer and the terrible fate that awaited anyone who dared to complain of boredom? Now I was doomed, for I knew enough to realize that Mom considered my pronouncement of boredom a summer-long condition. From that day on, she would arrive in my bedroom long before I wanted to get out of bed and declare, "Here's your list for the day. Let's get busy." Suddenly the sweet memory of boredom tore at my heart. Why had I so foolishly given it up? How easy to breeze through summer in a bored state, making my own decisions about whether to ride my bike around the neighborhood or go swimming in the farm pond. But it was too late now. I'd blown it. Summer vacation might just as well have been over. Now I was reduced to counting the days until I could escape to go back to school. Something was seriously wrong with this picture! And then, August arrived, the official "dog days" of summer and our family of seven would pile into the station wagon and head out for some cool spot in the mountains or down on the James River. But who cared where it was? It was away from the house and those horrible chores! Once again, I found myself counting the days until school was back in session, disappointed that the dreams I'd had for an enjoyable summer just hadn't turned out as planned. But isn't that the way life is much of the time? We focus so much on pressing into the next season, which we hope will be better, that we miss the joys of the season we're in.

Maybe we'd be wise to heed the advice of the Apostle Paul, who said, "I have learned in whatever state I am, to be content" (Philippians 4:11)—even in the "dog days" of summer.

Court Street Members in the Community

Did you know Flo Traywick helped make this happen?

Reported by The News and Advance in the June 25th edition:

More than 40 people turned out Monday afternoon for the unveiling of the city's newest historic marker (left) dedicated to diplomat James Rives Childs, a Lynchburg native who served as a code breaker in the U.S. Army during World War I. Childs became a Foreign Service Officer in 1923 and served in the position until he retired in 1953. While serving as charge d'affaires for the American Legation in Tangier, Morocco, during World War II, he helped 1,200 Hungarian Jews escape the Holocaust with visas to Spanish Morocco. President Harry Truman presented Childs with the Medal of Freedom in 1946 to honor his service.

Our members make a difference in the community by sharing their time and talents.

"Each one should use whatever gift he has received to serve others, faithfully administering God's grace in its various forms."

~ 1 Peter 4:10

(This article was submitted by George Clark.) If you would like to honor a member for their work in the community; please submit to the church office by the 15th of each month.
