DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY FOR FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

This power of attorney authorizes another person (your agent) to make decisions concerning your property for you (the principal). Your agent can make decisions and act with respect to your property (including your money) whether or not you are able to act for yourself. The meaning of authority over subjects listed on this form is explained in the Uniform Power of Attorney Act, chapter 12, title 15, Idaho Code. This power of attorney does not authorize the agent to make health care decisions for you. You should select someone you trust to serve as your agent. The agent's authority will continue until your death unless you revoke the power of attorney or the agent resigns. Your agent is entitled to reasonable compensation unless you state otherwise in the Special Instructions. This form provides for designation of one (1) agent. If you wish to name more than one (1) agent, you may name a co-agent in the Special Instructions. Co-agents are not required to act together unless you include that requirement in the Special Instructions. If your agent is unable or unwilling to act for you, your power of attorney will end unless you have named a successor agent. You may also name a second successor agent. This power of attorney becomes effective immediately unless you state otherwise in the Special Instructions. If you have questions about the power of attorney or the authority you are granting to your agent, you should seek legal advice before signing this form.

Disposition Options and Directions

Cremation

- Body placed into rigid, leak resistant, combustible cremation container (like a casket) which is then placed into the crematory and exposed to heat and flame.
- When complete, everything except bone material is gone.
- Remaining bone material is then processed down to particulates and powder, referred to as ashes.
- Ashes are placed in a temporary urn to scatter or a permanent urn to display or bury in a cemetery.

Conventional Burial

- Body may or may not be embalmed.
- Placed into a casket, usually constructed of either wood, or steel.
- Casket transported to a cemetery for burial.
- Liner/vault is placed into the open grave by cemetery staff prior to the arrival of the casket.
- Casket is usually mechanically lowered into the liner/vault.
- After graveside ceremony, cemetery staff place a lid on the liner/vault and fill the grave back in with soil and replace the sod.
- Cemetery burials of both caskets and urns are commonly marked and memorialized with a headstone.

Green Burial

- Green burial takes place without embalming.
- Body is placed into a biodegradable container, which could be a casket made from wood or woven materials like willow branches, or it could be a cloth shroud.
- Body is transported in this container to a green cemetery, sometimes called a natural burial ground or conservation burial ground.
- Casket or shroud is lowered into the open grave either mechanically, or by hand, and is placed in direct contact with the earth.
- Soil and topsoil are returned in their order to close the grave.
- Conventional burial liners and vaults are prohibited in green burial, thereby facilitating an efficient return to natural cycles. In some cases, green burial is used to further ecological restoration and conservation goals.

Alkaline Hydrolysis (Aquamation, Flameless Cremation, Water Cremation)

- Body is placed unadorned, or in a shroud made of silk or wool, into a single stainless-steel vessel which is air and watertight.
- Approximately 95 gallons of water along with sodium hydroxide and/or potassium hydroxide is introduced into the chamber.
- Chamber may be pressurized and is heated to 200 300 degrees Fahrenheit. Over the course of 6 16 hours, depending on equipment used, the natural decomposition process that occurs in burial is dramatically sped up.
- Results are softened bone and a sterile liquid containing salts, sugars, amino acids and peptides. There is no tissue and no DNA left.
- Liquid is released to be recycled by the local wastewater treatment authority or diverted and used for fertilizer.
- After drying, the softened bone material is processed down to a powder similar to cremated remains.
- The hydrolyzed remains may be placed in an urn, kept at home, buried in a cemetery, or scattered.
- Uses significantly less energy than cremation and creates no emissions. The technology has been in use since 1888.

Natural Organic Reduction (Human Composting, Terramation)

- Body is placed into a vessel with straw, alfalfa, and wood chips or sawdust and stays in the vessel for 30 days while oxygen is gently moved through to stimulate the naturally occurring microbes to work with the biomass to transform the body to safe, sterile soil.
- Vessel is continually monitored with sensors and is gently turned at the appropriate times to facilitate the process.
- After composting, remains are screened for inorganic material such as prosthetic implants.
- Bones are processed to a powder and mixed back into the composted remains, which are then placed in a secondary vessel to rest and cool for another 30 days. During the cooling phase bone material composts completely.
- End result is approximately 250 300 pounds of topsoil, with a volume of approximately 1 cubic yard which can be released to the family or donated to an ecological restoration project or some of both.

Full Body Donation

- Pre-registration with a Willed Body Program is required to donate your body to medical science.
- University of Washington and Western Washington University both have programs.
- Not every body is accepted, even if registered, so it's important to have a back-up plan. If accepted, body is embalmed and remains are used in whole or in parts for research and instruction for approximately one year. At the end of that time their remains are cremated and returned to their family. There is typically no cost associated with cremation or any of this process.
