Monika Steinhart-Klein - MSK

When the silence becomes overwhelming and my restless legs demand attention, I reach for paints, brushes, and canvas.

The colours begin to speak. They enjoy one another's company, endure tensions, and radiate with joy. In their struggle for space, they either find harmony or, through conflict, create distance. They yearn for solitude or seek connection, craving closeness, peace, or calm.

They live in silence.

These are the moments that sustain me—the ones I need to "caress" my soul and soothe my restless legs. My journey as an artist is a pathway to that inner quiet.

I found this path four years ago during the coronavirus pandemic. The world stood still, but my legs didn't. I told myself, "Dare to do it, just do it. Keep going, discover, explore, enjoy, and have fun. Live and create—create and live—in silence."

With no previous training and a great deal of courage, I stepped into the unknown. Since then, I've continued to explore artistic styles and techniques, experimenting with different materials. It's been a free and exciting journey along unfamiliar roads—my own path as an artist. The aim? To find joy in silence.

And beyond that, I want to share my art to open conversations—and above all, to inspire. To show how even a crisis can become an opportunity... sometimes, even loudly.
