Dear Dr. Moran,

Thank you for your letter.

Ryebank Fields is clearly a valued green space for the local community, and it's obvious there is strong feeling about protecting it. Decisions like this shouldn't be pushed through without properly listening to the people who actually live in the area and use the space. In my view, local people should have the final say on what happens to their community and their green spaces.

From what I'm hearing, it's clear many residents don't want anything done to the field, and that needs to be taken seriously and respected. Green spaces like this aren't easy to replace once they're gone, and they play an important role for the community. I believe the priority should be protecting spaces that local people value, rather than going against the wishes of the community.

I will always support listening to residents and making sure their voices are properly represented in decisions like this.

Kind regards Ian carter
