PREFACE

I would like to start with an excerpt from an antique book called The Great Awakening in the Middle Colonies by Charles Hartshorn Maxon which was published in 1920. The book highlights the founding of this great nation on Judeo-Christian principles and how different Christian denominations in the colonies came together during The Enlightenment Period to create a new American identity.

"The Great Awakening has sometimes been represented as a tempest of ungoverned passions that swept over the colonies, leaving wreckage everywhere in the alienations and divisions in families, neighborhoods, and churches, the undermining of cherished institutions, and a relapse into debauchery, and irreligion. An impartial study of the period, however, free from partisan and denominational bias, leads to a very different conclusion. It is that thousands and thousands were given by the Great Awakening a new view of life's values, and from this view were derived new energies and new sympathies which gave direction not only to the subsequent career of these thousands but to the development of the whole American people. It was more than wave on wave of excitement; it was a transforming process in the nation's life." (Chapter X, p. 139).

The Democrats (and RINOs) have been wanting a "fundamental transformation" of this great nation by shredding the U.S. Constitution. They pushed the Hart-Simpson Act of 1965 to open the floodgates to immigration from all parts of the world. It was all done in the name of "social justice" and creating a more "equitable world." Simple translation: open borders to inject socialism. It opened the gate to implement an evil strategy of divide and rule. The masses are stirred up by fabricating friction between the haves v. have-nots, rich v. poor, colored v. Caucasians, Christians v. non-Christians, and so on and so forth. America has irreversibly changed since then.

The American demographic landscape has been constantly changing. We the People need to be judiciously pragmatic in restoring the U.S. Constitution to her old glory. It is time to beat the leftists at their game by building alliances just like the Enlightened did centuries ago. It is my attempt through this pamphlet, not only to explain my Hindu faith, but to create a bridge for minorities to cross over and be one with the patriotic American spirit.

This is my effort to bring back the spirit of oneness for the new Reawakening of life's values that we all cherish. Rather than fighting each other in the name of race, color, creed, and religion; let's come together as people who believe in moral and family values, with real love and respect for those who believe in peace and prosperity for America.

In our deliberations, let's put CONSTITUTIONAL AMERICA FIRST!

HINDUS IN AMERICA

Mr. Maxon in The Great Awakening (p. 149-150) concludes that "the revival spirit was always the foe of denominational and racial prejudices." "The Great Awakening widened the horizon of the people, for it was the first intellectual movement in which all the colonies participated." "This helped create a common American spirit." It is my effort to widen the horizon of all Americans, with an intellectual discussion about my faith and demonstrate that Hindus are friends of America. Together, we can create a renewed American spirit, maybe this will be the new great reawakening of our times.

Before I explain Hindu values in detail, let me present the results of our values in terms that everyone can relate to. Most Americans in the metropolitan areas have come across Hindus from India, and many know them as neighbors and colleagues from work.

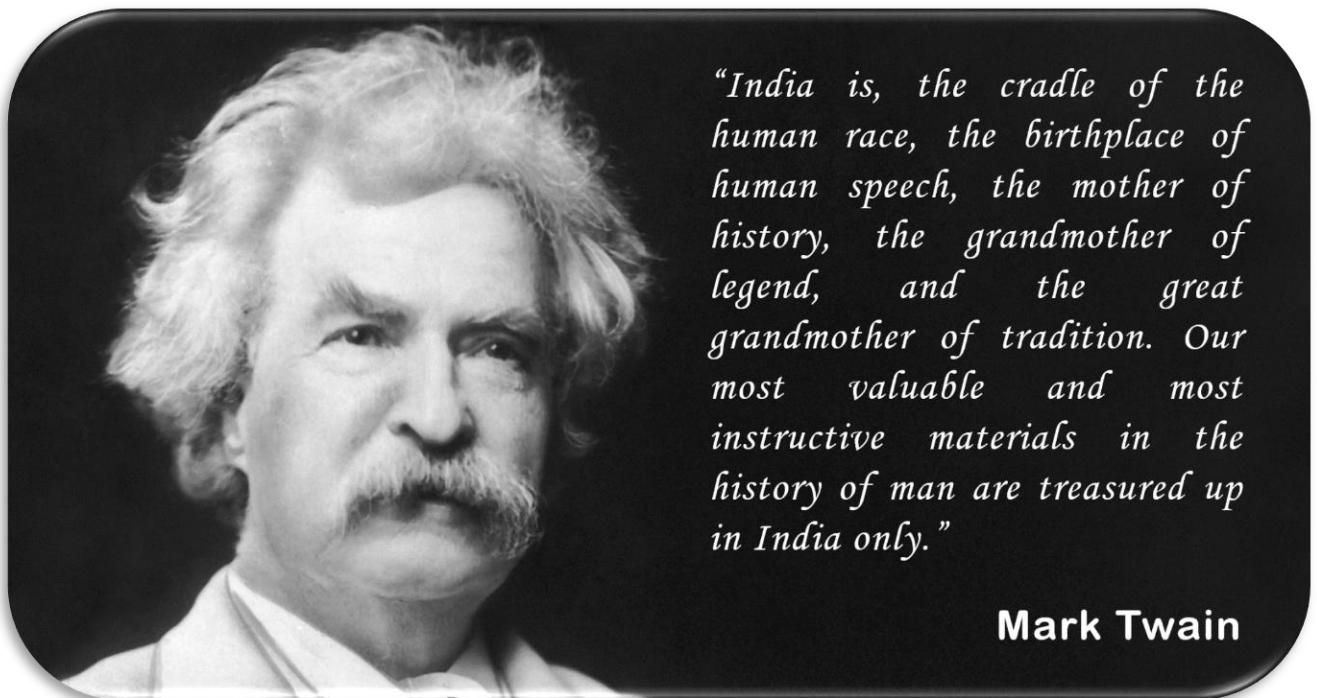

In spite of constant targeting and maligning by the media, academia, the entertainment industry, and social media, Hindus have achieved great accomplishments in a relatively short period of time (time frame explained later). They have achieved these feats thanks to their millennia-old faith, knowledge, discipline, and perseverance in the face of relentless persecution.

Real-life facts about Hindus that many Americans can relate to:

- ★ A faith that raises their families with strong morals and family values.
- ★ A faith that has the lowest divorce rate in their marriages.
- ★ A faith that has a biological father (man) and a biological mother (woman) raising their children together in 99% of Hindu households.
- ★ A faith that raises the education score of any school district where Hindus reside in big numbers.
- ★ A faith that has the highest level of education in the USA.
- ★ A faith that has the highest percent of income and income taxpayers in the USA, with most Hindu households making upwards of six figures.
- ★ A faith whose children go on to excel in STEM occupations.
- ★ A faith with the entrepreneurial spirit to build the U.S. economy.
- ★ A faith that has an almost non-existent crime rate in the U.S.
- ★ A faith that raises the real-estate values wherever Hindus reside in big numbers.
- ★ A faith that owns a vast swath of land in the US and NEVER considers it as "conquered" land.
- ★ A faith that has never ever blown-up buildings or committed mass killings in the name of religion.
- ★ A faith that is open to everyone without conversion!
- ★ A faith that has never converted, nor has been judgmental of people of other faiths.
- ★ A faith that is NEVER advertised by the followers, because they don't have an ideology to promote.

- ★ A faith that is non-authoritarian, is tolerant, and lives in peace with its neighbors.
- ★ A faith that is often mocked and misrepresented as a pagan religion, but still leaves most followers undeterred.
- ★ A faith that quietly forgives the trespassers for mocking it as a pagan religion because the trespassers do not know what they do.
- ★ A faith that may look complex to outsiders but is a humble way of life for the followers.
- ★ A faith that has hundreds of scriptures that never ever mention harming/demeaning non-Hindus.
- ★ A faith that has never tried to steal American national security secrets to benefit India, for e.g., like some Chinese do for China.
- ★ A faith that has neither harmed America, nor denigrated the U.S. Constitution.
- ★ A faith that enjoys life, liberty, and the pursuit of the American dream.

Such qualitatively magnificent accomplishments of Hindus in America demonstrate the richness of their faith, culture and the deep-rooted values that propagate enviably successful lives. These are fortunes bestowed by the SUPREME POWER; we just happen to call Him by different names. He does not discriminate, but blesses those who live righteously, regardless of their race, color, creed, or religion. Of course, trials and tribulations are part of our temporary existence on earth; they are the hoops we have to jump through to prove our worth to seek salvation.

“India is, the cradle of the human race, the birthplace of human speech, the mother of history, the grandmother of legend, and the great grandmother of tradition. Our most valuable and most instructive materials in the history of man are treasured up in India only.”

Mark Twain

HINDU VALUES

Hinduism proudly stands on a foundation that does not have a drop of human blood mixed in natural propagation of our divine knowledge throughout the world over thousands of years. Our ancestors never forced our scriptural knowledge on anyone; they never used fear tactics on anyone to accept Hinduism or else be condemned to hell; they never used brutal force on non-believers, or raped their women, or killed their children, or plundered their material wealth to make them accept Hinduism.

Historically, Hinduism was not even labeled as a religion, rather it was deemed to be a simple way of life in His complex Creation. Anyone and everyone could/can practice a Hindu lifestyle. It is not the outer shell (clothes, accessories, food, language, etc.) of a human body that needs to change to be a Hindu, rather the invisible, eternal inner-self. Nowhere in our scriptures are we asked to gang up to force our will on others either by hook or by crook, or convert them to a singular way. In fact, we are asked to refrain from it because displaying arrogance of supremacy is deemed evil and demonic. Our scriptures are based on "self" and not the "collective."

We (humans) are mere landscapers to take care of His landscape until He asks us to retire. And while here on His created earth, He asked us through His scriptural knowledge to live a value-based life and follow practices to fulfill our social contract with other landscapers (including all life; plants, animals, birds, and aquatic creatures) whom He has sent to take care of His Creation.

Hindus believe in following basic human values to help sustain humanity and carve out a path for an individual's salvation.

- ★ Knowledge: is the first step towards enlightenment.
- ★ Intellect: intellectual honesty is key to absorbing knowledge.
- ★ Humility: humbleness, thankfulness, gratefulness in receiving God.
- ★ Purity: cleanliness of heart, mind, body, and the transcendental soul.
- ★ Natural Law: not deviating from the natural order - birth to death.
- ★ Truth: understanding and applying truth without prejudice.
- ★ Control of Senses: Control smell, taste, touch, sight, and hearing to live a balanced life. If not controlled; it can lead to greed, anger, and lust, and a total ruin of His beautiful Creation, including one's soul.
- ★ Non-Covetousness: righteously build wealth, without coveting.
- ★ Patience: Hindu belief is to build patience so that we are not impulsive in our actions.
- ★ Calm: impulsiveness can cause loss of control, thus ruin life.
- ★ Karma: accountability. Karma can be good or bad.
- ★ Service: provide service selflessly without a hidden agenda.
- ★ Forgiveness: the ultimate virtue.

HINDU PRACTICES

A Hindu's life begins before birth and continues after death. The focus is not on the "body" but the invisible transcendental soul. While on earth, all Hindu values and practices are wrapped around slowing us down to build patience, perseverance, and purity to ultimately seek salvation.

In a Hindu's spiritual life, the values and practices are instilled from an early age. The main premise is to build character through:

- ★ Faith: is a roadmap to seek salvation. It is a solo journey aided by parents, elders, and gurus. The journey is enlightened by worship.
- ★ Worship: One God, a million Gods, or no God; Hindus worship to seek salvation through many ways prescribed in their scriptures.
- ★ Yoga: enlightenment yoga and work (service) yoga are different ways to serve Him. Here, yoga does not mean (physical) exercising yoga, but mental and spiritual practices.
- ★ Non-violence: Harming His creation is violence (not to be confused with physical violence or crime). Violence (hurtful behavior) can be in speech and actions.
- ★ Patience: Patience is an evolving virtue, perfected through practice. We must refrain from instant gratification; it can lead to dissatisfaction.
- ★ Satisfaction: Satisfaction is self-explanatory, but dissatisfaction happens when a person is detached from reality. It leads to anger, hatred, and loss of reason, which ruins a person's thinkability.
- ★ Honesty: in thoughts, words and conduct brings satisfaction in accepting the fruits for our labor as His blessings.
- ★ Compassion: towards His Creation brings satisfaction and harmony.
- ★ Moderation: balance in work and all aspects of life are necessary to live in peace and harmony.
- ★ Charity: is unconditional giving to better His Creation.
- ★ Love: unconditional love is free to give but priceless to receive.
- ★ Respect: starts with first and foremost our parents, then gurus, righteous authority, fellow human beings and His entire Creation.
- ★ Sacred Vows: can be spoken or even unspoken to respect His entire Creation.
- ★ Non-judgmental: Refrain from judging without knowledge and without reflection of values and practices.
- ★ Divine Conduct: All of the above!

The noble words and actions in Values and Practices are in fact the classical liberal principles. The word "liberation" (of the soul) is key, but politics today make people shamelessly enslaved to coveting and dependent on inhumane satanic vices. Sadly, the corrupt governments make woke (immoral and unnatural) behavior legal and acceptable. Thus, forcing woke social experimenting on the masses to create conflict amongst We the People.

HINDU PERSECUTION

Hindus' rich heritage was under attack by foreign invaders long before B.C. More recently, the Hindu persecution started with the barbaric Islamic invasion around 1100 A.D., followed by the brutal colonial British rule from 1600 A.D. until 1947 A.D. After almost 1000 years of the dominance of foreign rule, Hindus emerged as a free and independent people in 1947 but were quickly engulfed by another foreign ideology called socialism.

Hindus' wealth was plundered, and the people tortured, women raped, and murdered for simply being "kafirs" or "pagans." Name calling and/or mocking have also been part of their evil strategy from the beginning. Evil wins because good retracts. Our good, peaceful ways were/are called pagan in nature, but looting, coveting, torturing, raping, forceful or deceitful conversions - now that's "civilized?" Most Hindus would prefer their paganism over being "civilized" and practicing greed, intolerance, conformity, a superiority complex, arrogance, brutality, judgmentalism, and hypocrisy.

Hindus were easy to conquer by foreign invaders because of Hindus' non-violent, non-conquering scriptural teachings, and rules of engagement in war. Hindus' generous hospitality rules also worked against them. They were civilized and disciplined in their conduct. In wars, Hindus were abiding by the rules of war by only engaging with the armies of warring factions, but the foreign invaders were barbaric in nature. Many of our original Hindu manuscripts, scriptures, and temples have been permanently destroyed by the Muslim and the British invaders.

After India's independence from colonial British in 1947, the socialists took over and continued the plunder of India and Hindus. Even the basic necessities in life, such as electricity and water, were denied by the socialist government, making the already Muslim-tortured, British-looted India, poorer, dirtier, unhygienic, meaner and lawless. The misery of foreign invasions and socialism brought India to extreme poverty in the modern world.

Under socialism, citizens struggle to make ends meet, and survival is only of the mightiest. Barriers to good life were erected in independent India in the forms of high taxes, a high regulatory environment, and centralized government controls. For-profit institutions were deemed bad and non-profits or charities were considered good. Hindus lacked money to open schools or hospitals for the mass population. This void was filled by foreign money coming from foreign religious institutions, supported by the Industrial Revolution of the West and/or liquid gold (oil) money coming from the Middle East. The lure and the misery of socialism is such that people will even give up their religion to get something from anyone to survive. Presently, we are witnessing the lure of socialism in the United States, which has created an entitled generation. By the time this "me" generation of "useful idiots" realizes what hit them, the misery of socialism will leave them "useless."

Why do you think I have been fighting so hard against socialism in the USA for so long? I know what is coming down the pipe. I don't want my kids born in the US to go through what I went through under socialism.

The kafirs or the pagans were/are led to believe that it wasn't socialism in India and pre-independence authoritarian rulers but their generational sin of idolatry rituals that prevented them from being successful and have a better life. The brutal swords of conversions from pre-independence India turned into a deceitful lure in the name of charity. Due to the extreme misery of socialism, many Hindus sold/sell their religion (understandably so) for just a few bags of rice or a few dollars and a promise for a job to feed their families.

We have seen many people flocking to special-protected class minority groups, with a mountain of grievances. It also "qualifies" them for a "minority status" to attack the majority population and get special exemptions and favors from the government. Politicians feed off of these divisions among people. Politicians love pitching people against people.

The same has already started happening in America. Americans are, sadly, finding out on how a country is attacked from within in the name of minority rights. The leftists and the radicals have conquered many elected offices, geographical areas, and control the public relations narrative in America. Almost all socialist policies are passed in the name of protecting "minority rights" and if the majority stands against these voter-bank-special-privileges, the majority is attacked as being racist, bigots, and all-sorts-of-phobes. And then, the people start to balkanize.

And that's why I am fighting this righteous war against socialism because my experience guided by basic intelligence facilitates me to see within America what I have seen before. Regardless of our race, color, creed, religion, sex, age, etc., we all yearn for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. And the only way to defend these virtues is by restoring the Constitution.

The war is between freedom lovers who believe in "live and let live" and those who want to control our individual aspirations and make us bend/submit to their tyrannically authoritarian worldview or religious view. Socialism/communism is a religion to those who follow it; there is no morality or conscience that guides them. They believe that the strength is in numbers and to achieve utopia at all costs by any means necessary. Killing, coveting, character assassination and such acts are merely the means that will justify their end. Sadly, it ends the "human" in humanity.

To understand this war, we need to first understand each other better. We need to build the bridge to march to defend the shining city on the hill. On the following pages, I am explaining issues related to my Hindu faith that I was attacked for during my primary campaign in 2022. This is a constructive response to what was a destructive effort to dispirit me. I hope you take the time to understand my faith better.

NO MISSIONARIES

Hindu scriptural knowledge is always received, never solicited!

Have you ever noticed that there are no religious missionaries that knock on your door to promote Hinduism or ask you to convert to their peace-loving ideology for eternal salvation? It is not because we deem ourselves inferior or are ashamed of our religion, but because Hindu scriptures refrain followers from cheapening the value of their religion by promoting it unsolicited. Even in this pamphlet, I am not sharing my scriptural knowledge, but explaining why we Hindus do things the way we do.

Hindus do not impose their religious will on others or are judgmental of anyone's belief system. Hinduism is a decentralized, un-herded, eternal faith, and as Hindus, we follow our individual path for salvation with the help of a guru/teacher. The emphasis in our scriptures is on "personal responsibility" and clearly indicate that we must attain "self-realization" through "self-consciousness." Hinduism does not promote us vs. them ideology.

We are not encouraged to share our scriptural knowledge because God clearly mentions in our scriptures that finding Him is not an easy task. It takes education, wisdom, dedication, perseverance, and humility to receive His message. It is an individual's salvation and not "collective" salvation. Not using your own intellect to differentiate between right and wrong is inexcusable. Being herded to do wrong is also inexcusable.

Those who have criticized Hinduism until now were unopposed because there was never a counter defense presented. Going forward, please tell those vested interests not to act like cowards and criticize Hinduism without having a knowledgeable devout Hindu present there to counter their lies, or better yet, do your own research. The vested interests, herders, and the media (both on the right and the left) work towards keeping their followers in the dark.

Over time and over generations, the lies and the distortions take a strong hold in the minds of the followers, and they start believing in the superiority of their race, religion, and ideology. They get "mentally programmed" to either shut down any challenges to their belief system or they subconsciously trigger the Orwellian hate. Isn't this happening in our institutes of learning today, where our children have been brainwashed by the hate hustlers?

Hinduism has always humbly enjoyed plurality of thought and God created diversity for our temporary existence in His permanent universe. I am not promoting my faith through this pamphlet but defending it. I have a vested interest in bridging the divide between Hindus and all Constitution loving Americans. I lost in the Republican primary election of 2022 which I believe is due to the misgivings about my faith. I am trying to clear the air. Hindus and constitutionalists are a synergistic fit to save America against those who are demanding the desecration of our religious liberties and freedoms enshrined in the U.S. Constitution.

A MILLION GODS

Before, I delve into “the million Gods” theory, here is an undeniable fact: that throughout human history, Hindus have never killed, converted, coveted, or established a no-go zone in the name of any of their “millions of Gods.” The “pagan” (as we are mockingly called) Hindus have never ever committed terrorist acts or genocides against non-Hindus in an effort to convert or eradicate them. Hinduism is by far the oldest, the most diverse, peaceful, inclusive, and tolerant religion of all. The west has just recently started using these words as lip-service, and as part of their evolving culture, while we in Hinduism have been practicing it for thousands of years.

A million Gods for Hindus? No, wait there’s more, we have:

- 30+ languages and over 100+ local dialects.
- 20+ shades of color.

Talk about love, peace, tolerance, enjoying diversity, celebrating each other’s festivities throughout the year, never coercing each other, and happily getting along! We, Hindus, never bothered to monopolize God as ours, or pigeonhole Him. We are His, and He is OURS! No lip service there! Hindus have peacefully walked the walk in His name for thousands of years! Now, here’s the kicker, even with a million+ Gods, and so much diversity, we Hindus never had a single conflict in the name of God Almighty! Isn’t that humbling and impressive? We just don’t subscribe to us vs. them mindset, to us, it’s silly to think like that. If God wanted everything a certain way, He could have done that but he didn’t – why? Satan is the one who divides to conquer.

It may appear to those who have not read or understood Hinduism that there are a million Gods, but the reality is far different. There is only ONE God, but because humans tend to walk away from faith time and time again, He reappears (reincarnates) on Earth to reestablish righteousness. Time and again, He has shown that He will take whatever manifestation necessary to destroy evil. Each of His manifestation has a beautiful history associated with it. He, periodically, helps us restore our faith in Him.

Christians believe in Jesus Christ’s Second Coming, but if Hindu scriptures have demonstrably proven that He does come back time and again, why is it laughable and mockable? In Hinduism, with each manifestation came a new denomination/following. A following not in conflict with the existing belief system but as a supplement to bolster our faith in Him. And those denominations are what people think are the “million Gods.” Other religions, such as Sikhism, and Buddhism, that have sprung out of Hinduism have also not preached killing, converting, raping, coveting or such demonic acts. They have peacefully added to Hindus’ beautiful diversity.

HIS MANIFESTATIONS

He is G-O-D, the Almighty, the Creator! What can hold Him back from manifesting in any form in His own Creation. His power is limitless, His imagination is limitless, which is abundantly evident in the endless universe He created, with minute attention to detail.

During His manifestations, people, places, practices, birds/animals/aquatic creatures, and time in Hindu lunar calendar (associated with His manifestation) became a reason to celebrate and were raised to a higher pedestal worth respecting and/or worshipping.

It is the limited human mind that molds Him in a limited sphere. It is the small thinking and the petty divisions that fail to capture His Magnificence and Glory in the Highest. It is the arrogance of human mind which believes that we are better than any of His other creations. It is the false belief that makes us think that He likes us better than anything else in His Creation.

Why should He not like plants, birds, animals, aquatic creatures, or anything from His Creation more than humans? After all, humans are the only ones who have stepped away from the natural order and into social experimenting. When was the last time we saw two bulls ramming into each other trying to make a "birthing" bull out of them? Or trying to feminize a bull by milking him? And then go around propagating that woke lie by force throughout the cattle family, including little, innocent calves?

Humans are the ones who have perverted His Glorious Creation, by fabricating limitations on His limitless powers. Hinduism explains in great detail His Creations and Manifestations, and that's why Hindus are so inclusive and respectful of His entire Creation in their faith, without discrimination or prejudice. They are also extremely humble in not putting themselves on a higher pedestal in His Creation.

Yes, Hindus see His Existence in His creation around us, be it in other human beings, animals, plants or a lifeless stone. Many Hindus even offer prayers to stones; the notion behind that is that their faith is deep enough for them to see Him through His creation of stones. And some believe that if your faith is deep and true that God will accept your prayers - and display His existence in that "stone." I, with experience claim that to be demonstrably true.

There is no perfect way to worship Him, and He knows it. Again, He is G-O-D, Who can see through it all, He can decipher the genuine from the disingenuous. Hindu scriptures help us develop a spiritual vision, and power of faith to see His existence in everything around us. This helps devout Hindus to be respectful, thankful, grateful, and kind to His entire creation. It also provides them strength to endure pain and suffering in adverse times, without resorting to inhumane ways. Hindus can reason things out, without being herded to be judgmental, hypocritical, arrogant, deceptive, and cruel.

RULES FOR THEE ARE RULES FOR HIM!

Even though He is God Almighty, He takes humility to a whole new level. Since He has created the earth, He has also set the rules for every "life" to enter and exit this planet, which He Himself does not break.

In the case of human life, He always comes through a righteous holy matrimony of a mother (woman) and a father (man) through the natural process of life (conception to birth) that He has set forth for all inhabitants on Earth. Righteous matrimony is what makes us free of sin, and through His own birth, He proves just that. Hindus do not believe that we are born out of sin.

His every reappearance and manifestation has been documented in Hinduism throughout our history of thousands of years. With the advent of modern-day technology, scientists have carbon-dated thousands of years in proving His reappearances. There has never been any ambiguity about His birthday, time, and birthplace on earth. Hindus still celebrate His birthdays based on the Hindu lunar calendar which has been in use forever.

The circumstances of His birth are also well documented, and so are His entire life journeys. There are no broken links (missing years) in His lives or missing time frames. His looks, color, and physical characteristics from His time of birth to His return in every reincarnation are also very well documented. They know exactly how He was in each of His reincarnations and manifestations. He has created us in His image, and that's why it is so easy for Hindus to create His images.

His engraved images provide the eye contact which can be very consoling in times of need, but also frightening when guilty. In Hinduism, there is nothing left to the "imagination", and everything is explained in exhausting detail, but people just don't want to spend the time to learn. Orwellian hate towards Hindus is easy compared to reading their in-depth knowledge.

Hinduism promotes a 1-on-1 relationship with God without any middlemen. Hindus do not have to go to another human being to confess their guilt and sins or beg for mercy when they know that He knows it all and that He is the ultimate Judge. Besides, those other human beings might very well be hypocritical, judgmental, and wrapped in lust and pedophilia while concealed behind the robe of trust. And their hierarchy might be concealing their dirty behavior from the followers, to maintain a clean image. The hierarchy can also make it acceptable (follow the money) to have lustful divorces, bear kids out of wedlock, and coveting for their own establishment.

Hindu scriptures haven't had the need to change with the times. There is no hierarchy in Hinduism. God knows each one of us and only He has the power to discipline or reward us for our conduct (karma). Hindus believe that our good and bad karma accumulate over many lives and determine our rewards in any given life. Hindus are encouraged to continue to build good karma in each life to ultimately seek salvation.

ROLE MODEL

God is a great role model. Not only does He follow the same rules while on earth during His manifestations, He also goes out of His way to set an example for us to follow. His humility is breathtaking! He is the role model, the epitome of how He wants us to conduct ourselves in His image and be good stewards of His Creation. In all His reincarnations, He:

- ★ Honors His parents.
- ★ Honors His wife who is also revered as a Goddess.
- ★ Defends righteousness at all costs.
- ★ Does not harm His Creation for personal gain.
- ★ Does not promote vices such as lust, killing, cheating, coveting, raping, attacking the defenseless, even in His name. In fact, in Hindu scriptures, these acts are referred to as satanic in nature.
- ★ Never used lust as a reward to reach Heaven or Him.
- ★ Never preached killing fellow human beings to establish His Supremacy.
- ★ Puts Himself in human life situations and shows us a way out.
- ★ Delegated work to set an example for us, on how to get His job done, with humility - without the arrogance of "I did it." He promotes teamwork. If He wants, He can do anything without seeking anyone's help, but He doesn't. He can also proclaim that He did it all by Himself. And yet, He doesn't.
- ★ Has created us in His Image and through His image he teaches us to live life like Him.
- ★ He is neither sexist nor treats women as inferior.
- ★ In many instances, He called out Goddess to destroy evil and show the world a woman's majestic power.
- ★ He set up different departments just like we would have in our lives. They are deemed as second tier Gods, who have their rules, regulations, and norms that Hindus need to follow to achieve material gains or conduct ourselves.
- ★ He wants men to live in His image and women in Her image.

Hindus have never fought to exert supremacy of any one of His manifestations over the other. Our scriptures show that He has found a way to reach every heart that has sought Him. Each one of us is different - (just look at our DNA) - with differing emotions, feelings, and faith that cannot be duplicated. Hinduism allows customizing love and devotion for Him.

It is like different people driving different cars (pick your options) to reach a destination (HIM), but everyone must follow the same set of traffic rules. Rule breakers are deemed satanic. Unlike cops who might occasionally catch the rule breakers, God is a cop who is always watching. Can't fool Him!

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

God is humble, He is not sexist, biased or considers anyone or anything in His Creation as inferior. It is us humans who have created these divisions and superiority complexes in a race, color, creed, religion, sex, or mindsets. Time and again, throughout Hindu history there are instances where women have taken the heroic lead to reestablish righteousness and destroy evil. Through various incarnations and manifestations, Goddesses (Women) have single-handedly, and independently of God (Man) displayed the strength of a woman with instances of great valor and courage.

Women's rights have been part of the Hindu faith long before the modern world decided to "give" women their rights. Lord Himself (man) seems incomplete without His better half (woman). Again, leading through example, Lord our God, demonstrated woman as a natural "mother" who has more rights (mama bear) over her creation than man. Motherhood and womanhood are revered throughout Hindu scriptures.

History of Hinduism has shown that women are not only smart, strong, courageous, but also kind and nurturing. They are more methodical thinkers because they have to nurture their creation after giving birth. In the modern-day version of the world order, women have been oppressed by men simply because men have more physical strength to "control" or make women "submit" to their demands.

A woman is also a creator and a nurturer; she takes the pain inflicted on her by man, because she has to make sure that her creation gets the best environment to grow and prosper. She looks beyond herself to carry out His Glory. The endurance of a woman, the creator, in itself should have men pause to think (kind of hard for my gender to do) and admire the strength of a woman. Without a woman, man's existence is questionable, and vice versa.

Through numerous manifestations, He has also demonstrated that She is an integral part of Their (combined) Creation. If He is the Creator, She is the knowledge to maintain His Creation. If He is the provider, She is the conduit to receive Their blessings. If He is the destroyer of evil, She is the executioner.

Even though we mere mortals refer to the Creation as "His Creation," it is in fact "Their Creation" because without Her, He cannot accomplish anything. Not that He cannot, but He doesn't. This is how They promote mutual respect among male and female counterparts. Again, as role models, They have set examples for us to follow. They humbly trust each other, to carry out Their will, selflessly and sometimes independently, with great respect for One Another. Isn't that what They would expect from us, living in Their image?

BURNING WOMEN

We all know about the witch trials of the west, where voiceless, powerless, and defenseless women were put on trial and then hanged or burnt alive by mobs cheerfully watching the atrocities on those women. The women were brutally tortured and touched all over their bodies by those who were putting them on trials and executing them. The trials were supposedly a way to gain more followers for their faith through fear tactics. Of course, after their motive was met, there have been several successful attempts to either completely “whitewash” such atrocities and/or present kinder/gentler versions of these horrific events to the world.

The west, however, has grossly distorted the “sati” or “Jauhar” practices of SELF-IMMOLATION by Hindu women. The key word here is SELF. Unlike the witch trials in the west, Hindu women were not put on trial by powerful men to incite fear in the Hindu community to increase followers.

There is no reference at all in Hindu scriptures to blame women for “something” and then torture, mutilate, or burn them alive. There have never been insertions and deletions in Hindu scriptures by religious leaders to commit atrocities against anyone, including women.

Hinduism has an extremely “touchless” culture and tradition, a quick example would be the Hindu way of greeting: NAMASTE, folding hands in respect to greet or welcome.

It is unconscionable for a devout Hindu woman to be touched by a man (except her father, brother, husband, and her male children). Their bodies are their sacred honor and they have gone to great lengths to defend the sanctity of their being. Self-immolation was that ultimate sacrifice. But why self-immolate? This is what the western authors have intentionally not explained, of course, to further their motive and vested interest while demonizing Hinduism.

Please allow me to explain self-immolation. With the advent of the westerners invading India thousands of years ago, they brought “war practices” with them that were unfathomable to Hindus. Pre-western invasion wars between Hindu kings and queens were fought between armies, and territories were won or lost. Women, children, civilians, and private properties were primarily left untouched. But western invaders, who later became occupiers of our holy land, brought with them the brutality of looting, capturing, raping, torturing, and killing women, children, and civilians. They tore down our temples, burned our scriptures and converted many Hindus by force to their inhumane ways. The peace from our holy land was lost forever.

If women of any Hindu kingdom got the news of their king/queen losing a war to these brutal foreign invaders, they would start jumping into a burning fire pit to maintain the sanctity of their sacred honor. Loss in war also meant death of their husband/father/brother/sons, thus being left to the mercy of the invaders.

Okay, so what? Wars are ugly. Why self-immolate? Hindu women could have committed suicide to avoid capture and rape. Didn't they know how to jump off a cliff (head down), or drown themselves in a body of water, hang from a tree, or use a knife or poison? There are thousands of ways to kill oneself, then why go through the immensely painful way of dying by self-immolation? Why jump into a burning fire and scream your lungs out while burning? It certainly did not make a good PR or a photo-op.

The answer which no one in the western world dares to talk about is NECROPHILIA. A foreign concept unknown to Hindus, because Hindu scriptures call for respectful cremation of the dead bodies.

Necrophilia - Pietro_Pajetta-DerHass-1896

Hindu women did not want to take a chance of dying and leaving their dead bodies behind to be raped by the invaders – so they SELF cremated themselves and took their children with them. They did not want even their dead bodies to be played with.

THEY CHOSE ASHES OVER DISHONOR. I request people to please stop mocking or disrespecting them for their purity, courage and sacrifice to defend their God-given sacred honor. This ritual is no longer practiced in India.

A side note on CREMATION: Hindus cremate dead bodies because of a simple spiritual concept. Earth is a bridge we cross and we should not occupy it with a permanent home for our dead body. We have to leave this earth for His new creations. We are born out of dust; thus, we should not leave anything behind but dust. The only thing we carry back to Him is our indestructible soul.

ARRANGED MARRIAGES

Hindu families are built like a Banyan tree. We don't like to bear fruits that fall away from the tree but grow roots that strengthen the main tree. Actually, this is what has helped us survive the onslaught on our faith and traditions for thousands of years. We are a close-knit family.

The word "divorce" is absent from our root language Sanskrit. Many of us know our genealogical roots dating back to thousands of years. In fact, in our prayers and rituals we invoke the name of the "main root" to pay our respects. Sadly, many of these roots were chipped away through forceful or deceitful conversions over the past few thousand years and continue to this day.

Hinduism has gone through turmoil after the westerners started invading India. The leftists and the socialists are further damaging Hindu traditions, just as they disrupt the natural order of our existence and nuclear family.

Hindus take the concept of a "nuclear family" to the highest level. Marriages are not deemed between two people, but two families to strengthen the roots of faith, culture and traditions. Generally, the parents of both the bride and the groom sit down and go through a host of issues to make sure that the young couple will be a good match for each other and family at large. The Hindu family structure involves generations living together, because there is a strong emphasis to honor not just the father and the mother, but the extended family as well.

Grandparents and other elders in the family are the caretakers when the young couple is building their life. Similarly, because parents take care of their offspring when they are unable to provide for themselves, the offspring take care of the parents when they are unable to take care of themselves during their old age. It is a great tradition of love, caring, and sacrifice that is passed on generation after generation. I would again refer to Hindu values and Hindu practices explained earlier to demonstrate how Hindu families have survived persecution.

Marriages are not deemed for sexual pleasure, but to carry out His will, and since most devout Hindu children grow up learning that, they are respectful of their traditions. They maintain celibacy until marriage. Meeting of two bodies as one soul, requires love, trust and selfless dedication and that is what is cultivated in Hindus from a young age.

For many devout Hindus, there is no reason for experimentation or re-inventing the wheel in life, because the young couple has the guidance and nurturing of their elders, who may have faced similar situations in their marriage. And with continued parental guidance, divorce is not required, and families stay intact, without the need of recycling relationships. There is also no need for third party psychiatrists to counsel families, because there is always someone in the extended family who will connect with the troubled child/couple.

Dowry: There is no reference in Hindu scriptures to the practice of dowry. There is no equivalent word to the English word "dowry" in our root language Sanskrit. Traditionally, parents would voluntarily give their daughter gifts for her wedding, which they still do in all parts of the world. Hindu women were revered and maintained an equal or respectfully higher status in ancient India. With the brutal invasion of the west came their religious laws that also marginalized women's rights in India. Dowry was codified by the tyrannical British by passing laws giving men complete control over women and their property. Dowry was a European tradition brought to India by the British. One such reference is found in the marriage of British prince Charles II to Portuguese princess Catherine of Braganza in May of 1662. As part of her dowry, Bombay, which was part of the Portuguese-occupied territory was given to the British empire that occupied a large part of India.

The problem of dowry was exacerbated in socialist India after independence from colonial British in 1947. Brides got abused by the groom's family as an insurance policy to extort money to make ends meet. Socialism brings out the worst in mankind. With the basic necessities of life hard to achieve, people resorted to inhumane treatment of women. Dowry was decodified in India in 1961 by banning it. The practice has been eradicated to a great extent in modern India, where brides themselves are taking a strong stand against any demands of dowry. It is now a criminal offense to demand dowry.

Dowry will continue to be a blot on India, just as slavery, racism, and insurance killings continue to be a blot on the west.

LIVE FREE, LIVE FEARLESS AND TRANSCEND

FEARLESS: There is no fear instilled in Hindus to live a certain way or worship a certain way to seek salvation. We don't even have to believe in a God and we can still reach Him. There is no heaven and hell as a permanent place to be, but the ultimate goal for us is to seek salvation beyond those two destinations. As long as Hindus follow the Hindu Values & Practices, they are sure to reach Him. The mantra is live fearlessly but righteously! Righteous does not necessarily mean "religious."

BLASPHEMY: Hindus also do not have blasphemy laws. We are free to choose our path to Him. To seek salvation, Hindus abide by the basic human values of our social contract with fellow human beings and His entire Creation. We cannot wrap ourselves in ignorance, greed, lust, anger, arrogance and hypocrisy and expect a blissful result. We know through our subconsciousness and the Trinity situated within us that it is wrong to lie, cheat, kill, covet, bear false witness and be a hypocrite not just in His name, but even otherwise. These are considered demonic vices.

ACCOUNTABILITY: We as Hindus cannot knowingly choose the demonic path and expect Him to make up the difference when we die. To me, that's socialism: privatizing benefits of righteous behavior but socializing bad behavior - let someone else pick up the tab of bad karma. In Hinduism, there is accountability and personal responsibility at the core of "self-realization" through "self-consciousness." There is, of course, repentance, and salvation through penance for bad behavior - but again - that is through self-realization and self-consciousness.

WORSHIP FOR FREE: Hindu temples do not require memberships or forced contribution/donation to the priest or the temple. Therefore, they are not intrusive about our financial gains or incomes. Again, the importance is on the honor system and each one of us is supposed to contribute for the betterment of the faith based on a family's financial standing. All donations are voluntary, and the best form of charity is the one that no one knows, but Him. Unconditional service to family and community is a service to Him.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: The religious leaders of any Hindu temple have no reason to bad-mouth other religions to keep the congregation. In fact, there are no congregations because Hinduism is an unestablished, unherded, decentralized spiritual path. Hindu temples are open for anyone to walk in. Similarly, prayers are not a screaming contest but deemed best when no one hears them but Him. Hinduism focuses on the singularity of one's journey to Him without causing inconvenience to anyone or anything in His Creation.

THE IMPORTANCE OF A GURU

Time and again, His messages are also reinforced through gurus, pundits, teachers and priests. They all always have had the same message of peace and harmony. There are no contradictions, rewritings, or deviation from His righteous messages. That's why gurus are so revered in Hinduism. They are the teachers who help us see the Truth. Gurus are revered because they teach His teachings. The west, however, with control over the English language, has managed to associate a negative innuendo with the word "guru" - just like they have with many other Sanskrit words, such as "karma."

Thanks to guru-disciple and traditional close-knit Hindu family structures, the scriptural knowledge and the history have been very well preserved. Well-preserved even after the tyrannical Muslim and British rulers' repeated attempts to destroy the temples, Hindu institutes of learning, and the manuscripts. There are no old and new versions of His Reincarnations or revisions of Hindu scriptures to fit the political correctness of the day and age.

However, many gurus today (just like religious leaders from other religions) lean left politically, primarily to save their skin against media onslaught and character assassinations. They like the TV time and likes they receive to propagate leftist causes, while hiding behind the noble, gentle and kind messaging of our faith. They promote socialist messages without ever talking about the disastrous effects of socialism on mankind.

And that's why I am fighting this fight. Let's rebuild the world around us based on moral values, nuclear family values and country values that are common for all of us, regardless of race, color, creed, or religion. I see an alliance of peace and prosperity loving, We the People, as the only way to preserve God's permanent treasure through our temporary presence on earth!

A guru is one who will not force his personal belief on his/her disciples but guides them to find Him. A guru makes a person humble, fearless about knowing Him and not fearful of not accepting Him. A guru teaches how to look for source material and not believe hearsays. A guru teaches how to respectfully discern and question authority. A guru does not start a sect or a cult or a following or a denomination for himself but leads us to find Him. A guru is not driven by greed but extends his knowledge to his disciples.

A guru does not perform miracles. Only a con-man does and then calls himself a godman. There have been fake gurus and teachers who have tried to start a sect or a following by promoting a new denomination. Hindus can smartly figure that out and reject it. Hinduism does not require fear, deceit, mandatory contribution to any cause; hypocrisy of words v. actions; living with a superiority complex, and violence. When Hindus see such messages or demeanor, they are quick to walk away from it.

THE MULTITUDINOUSLY AND COMPLEXLY COMPLETE FAITH

Hinduism is a complex and complete faith because it deals in the entirety of an individual (mind, body and soul) with the Absolute. What seems complex to an outsider is a simple way of life for a practicing Hindu. Only a practicing Hindu's brain or a devout western researcher is capable of comprehending and bringing into practice what Hinduism offers for our temporary life on earth. Hinduism offers the cause, effect and remedy to complex life situations. Each aspect of our life is interconnected and interdependent with nature and must be balanced to live a complete life.

Of the many Hindu teachings, some that many can relate to are:

- ★ Yoga: for mind, body and soul. After early hesitance, the west has now adopted the Hindu practice of yoga, because the benefits are undeniably substantiated by medical science.
- ★ Herbal Medicine: The West is starting to understand the benefits of the Hindu diet, and use of herbs and spices in our daily life. Also, the benefits of fruits, vegetables and grains explained in ancient Hindu scriptures are now making headways into the modern medical sciences.
- ★ Astronomy: Hindu scriptures have explained the planets around us and their effect on earth and its habitants. The Hindu lunar calendar dates back to the beginning of time that explains the movements of planets in the solar system and their effect on our mind, body, and soul. The remedies are provided to keep our lives in balance with the planetary movements.
- ★ Architecture: and the Science of Construction: Chinese Feng-shui is now being used in many homes in the west. The Indian science of construction aligns not only the aspects of all natural elements surrounding us, but also the planetary movements of earth in correlation with other planets.
- ★ Astrology: The west is finally realizing the effect of the moon phases on the human mind, which our scriptures have explained thousands of years ago. Hinduism provides an extremely advanced science that explains the effects of all planets on our daily lives, from birth to death. This science is also a very good predictor of the past, present, and the future ups and downs in a person's life due to the movement of planets in the solar system.
- ★ Weaponry: In our modern-day science we have voice-activated arsenals, which is described in great detail in scriptures from thousands of years ago. What we refer to as a "voice-activated" command is known as a "mantra" in Hindu scriptures.

It is almost impossible for an individual to comprehend all these sciences in one lifetime, and therefore, we go to gurus in each field for advice, as and when needed. They are all interconnected and as Hindus we can easily connect the dots of our multi-dimensional complex life.

HOLY COW

What's the beef between Hindus and cows?

Hindu scriptures call for non-violence against every life in His entire Creation. Our scriptures specifically mention not to kill, and that includes any moving life. Hinduism does not provide lip service or selective killing to the principle of non-violence. Only the Warrior Class (explained later in this pamphlet) was allowed to kill and consume animals, if necessary.

Hindu scriptures do not mention a food chain with humans on top, but do mention a balanced diet of herbs, grains, vegetables, and fruits. Even modern-day health science now calls for the balanced diet that Hinduism has been preaching since thousands of years. To Him, all lives matter, because He created every life. It is the human mind that created the food chain to fit our human lifestyle.

He is G-O-D and He has knowingly created safeguards to protect all life. Through His many reincarnations and manifestations, He has "adopted" animals as His pets. This was His way of promoting kindness among human beings towards His creation. He did not adopt every single animal, bird or aquatic creature on earth, but the cow in particular has been a revered animal in Hindu scriptures. The cow is held to a higher ethical standard, because cow has been an integral part of Hindu heritage and traditional beliefs.

In one of His reincarnations, He was separated at birth from His biological mother. It was the cow's milk that was the best substitute for His mother's milk. To Him, the cow gave Him what a mother gives selflessly to her child. A cow embodies the Hindu virtues of tolerance, non-violence, dignity, humbleness, and strength. A cow is a kind animal, a selfless being, and owning a cow(s) was considered a symbol of prosperity and abundance.

Cows and her family are domestic animals and have had a long cultural and historical significance as they have been an integral part of Hindu lives. This relationship is what makes Hindus so passionate about not eating beef. In the west, some farmers don't slaughter and eat animals (even cows) they raise on their farms due to the relationship they build with the animal. A law was passed in the U.S. in 2018 to stop the slaughter and consumption of domestic animals such as dogs and cats. Horse meat is also not available for consumption in the US. Pork is forbidden for consumption amongst Muslims and in countries with Sharia Law.

Hindus are also not militantly vegan trying to force veganism on the world; they just go about their ways, and follow their faith. So why mock Hindus for being kind, gentle, loving and affectionate towards not only the cows, but to all life in His Creation? Is it because there is no fear of Hindus beheading anyone for insulting or demeaning their faith?

THE CASTE SYSTEM

The “caste system” (social status) exists in every race, color, creed and religion. The correct explanation to the caste system is “occupational categories” that have existed throughout human history and will continue to the end of time. The British exploited Hindus by pitching them against each other by injecting “social status” on one group against another. Our scriptures talk about pure capitalism and how each of the occupational categories can progress.

Universally, there are only four occupational categories, we cannot create a fifth or more:

Brahmins: The Intellectual Class: People who work with their minds to be gainfully employed fall in this category. Some of the examples would be teachers, doctors, lawyers, government officials, researchers, and priests. The income of these individuals is irrelevant, but they do get more respect due to their higher hierarchical position in society. They (sometimes) also have access to better things in life because of their social status. Isn't this true in every part of the world even today?

Vaishyas: The Business Class: Those who manufacture goods or produce agricultural products, buy and sell goods fall in this category. They are the capitalists. Capitalism in itself is not immoral, but crony capitalism is. Crony capitalism is making money with unfair tactics or illicit advantage. Our scriptures denounce greed and there are consequences to bad karma of making money immorally. However, there was no limit to how much a person could make through righteous means. Again, doesn't the business class exist in every society? Can't they afford better things in life if they are successful?

Kshatriya: The Warrior Class: The name explains it all. These were the defenders of a community, and the kingdom they served. They were mostly gainfully employed by the kingdom they served. This warrior class was given leeway in the Hindu principle of non-violence, and that too for a specific reason. They had to get immune to seeing blood pouring out of a body and the pain associated with it. They were allowed to kill wild animals for practicing their warrior skills. Domestic animals (especially cows) were not part of their practice schedules. They were allowed to consume meat, because wars could have kept them away from their homes. Please remember, in ancient days, it was mainly hand to hand combat, and the fight could have been between two unknown soldiers, and it had to be merciless. Any emotional weakness could have led to a loss in war.

Shudra: The Labor Class: The labor class consisted of those who worked with their hands. A shudra (labor class skilled artisan) could move up in the occupational category (caste system) by setting up a shop and becoming a trader (business class category) of his skill by creating products that people wanted and needed.

In each of the categories, one had to be proficient in the trade and practice. Individuals were free to move from one category to the other. For example, someone from the labor class could move into a business class by setting up a shop. My own family went on from a priest (Brahmin) class to a farming (Business) class, but they maintained their roots of daily prayers and rituals even after moving into the business category. There were never any restrictions on how an individual or a family sought Him. Hindus have always been free to find Him in their own unique ways as were prescribed in various scriptures.

Most importantly, if the community or the nation was attacked by a foreign entity, it was the duty of every citizen to take up arms (become Warrior class) to defend their boundaries. After the war was over and threat negated, people would go back to their professions.

BIRDS OF THE SAME FEATHER

From what is evident from the historical perspective on Hinduism, there were no hard and fast rules for an individual to be stuck in one professional category (caste) or the other. There were also no mandatory requirements that an individual stays in the profession (caste) his/her family belonged to. But the families preferred to marry or associate with other families from the same professional category (caste). The main reason was the cultural fit between the two families. There would have been less friction or needed adjustment for people from the same profession (caste) to mingle with each other. The caste system (if we can really call it that) became more rigid and continued to take a hardline approach after the west started attacking Hindus, both verbally and physically. Hindus had to move to the safe quarters of their closest community to safeguard their culture and traditions from the tyrannical persecution at the hands of British and Muslim invaders.

It is a natural human phenomenon, to move closer to their comfort and/or safety zone. Take my election for an example, given the everyday attacks on my faith, it is quite understandable that many Christians and Americans were apprehensive about voting for me because they were more comfortable with their kind of candidate. I don't have any qualms about it, and understand that most people would do what they did and for the reasons they did. It is rare that a guy like me comes along who is willing to get out of the comfort zone and walk towards the fire. Please pardon me for making you uncomfortable.

These professional categories exist in every race, color, creed and religion but, Hindu faith is the only faith that describes in extensive detail every aspect of our life. Duties and responsibilities of each professional category are very well defined, and expectations are realistic so that people would know how to seek job satisfaction. Hinduism does not promote material expectation, but instead promotes accepting the fruits of labor as His blessings. Most Hindus were realistic in their approach about life and could strive to be better. Using the emotional wedge of "dissatisfaction" the tyrannical British colonizers fabricated a “divide and rule” strategy to pitch Hindus against each other in the name of “justice.” They created non-existent “inequalities” in a culture that was based on Hindu values of satisfaction, humility, thankfulness, and gratefulness.

Americans can relate to this “divide and conquer” strategy in the form of the socialist/communist and similar divisive movements taking hold in America. It is very easy to make anyone emotionally unstable by injecting dissatisfaction and jealousies. A simple statement disguised as sympathy can easily do the damage, for example, “you work so hard, but you don’t get just compensation for that.” Such a statement will win the heart and easily stir up the emotions. The flip side would be to try and win the head by saying, “you should see how your manager got where he is and learn from him to emulate his success.” This statement seems callous because it requires hard work. Most people will prefer to be spoken to with sympathy (even if with a hidden evil agenda) and play into the hands of the “sympathizer”.

UNTOUCHABILITY

Untouchability has never been part of the Hindu religious texts, but became a blot on Hinduism, just like slavery has been a blot on the social fabric of the western world. The concept of untouchability stemmed out of the uncleanness of body of certain people. Later even the British were considered untouchables because they were deemed unclean, cruel and deceptive in their practices, same as Muslims.

To understand untouchability of a caste (occupation), one needs to travel back in time. Antique India’s hygiene practices were far better than the COVID era. The untouchables were sadly the lowest in the hierarchy of occupations. They were people of a community engaged in collecting human excrement, these were the “soil men and women” of the forgotten era.

Please understand while reading this that plumbed toilets were invented just a few centuries ago, and most societies/countries used someone to transport or deal with the human waste.

The sad part was that because they were deemed physically dirty, for their line of work, they were not allowed in people’s homes, communities and temples. They were almost living a condemned life and lived segregated. Their children were not integrated into society and were not accepted in schools.

They had separate entrances and exits and were not allowed to come close to people of other castes. The untouchables were also not allowed to draw water from the same well that other castes could draw from. They were not served by other castes and regularly discriminated against for who they were.

The pictorial description of discriminatory historical events is not to defend India's "caste" or untouchability system, but to remind the readers that the world has had worse events in human history than the caste system in India. After India's independence, in 1947 untouchability was outlawed, but long-held prejudices, sadly, still exist in some segments of society, just as they do in other parts of the world against someone for being who they are.

As sad as I am to report that while untouchability was part of India, I am also proud to say that Hindus, as a race or people of brown shades, have never-ever killed or built concentration camps to exterminate the untouchables. They were very much an integral part of the Hindu faith, but sadly grossly discriminated against.

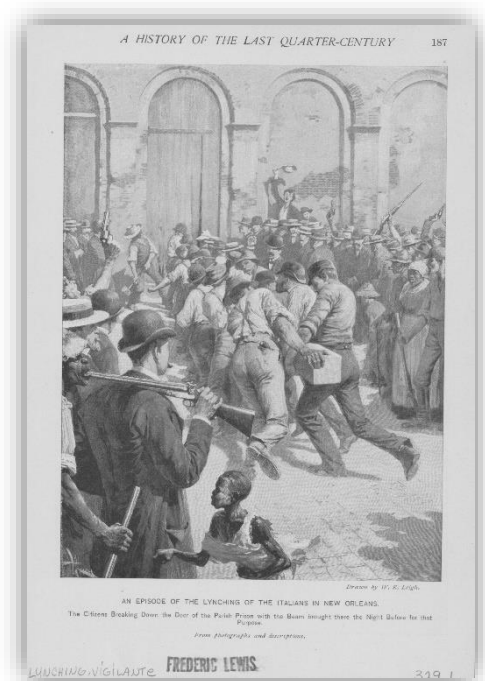

It is easy to cast stones at others when you have a favorable media to help whitewash the past of a certain race, color, creed or religion. Discrimination has been a part of human existence for as long as we can go back in human history. Many races, colors, creeds and religions have passed laws in their respective countries to eradicate discrimination and prejudices. However, it is not easy to eradicate long-held beliefs or legislate love. It can only happen if we can find ways to come together by forming alliances on what unites us rather than what divides us.

Even though, I have been fighting to defend the US Constitution side-by-side with patriotic Americans for over 15 years, did my loss in the 2022 Republican primary election not render me "untouchable" for who I am? I was repeatedly told that I had to be a Christian to win in the Republican primary. Was I not considered "less" or "inferior" for not having the right "pedigree" to seek an elected office through the Republican party?

I hope other minorities who feel discriminated can see that we can stand up for our rights without compromising our faith, values and principles. We can, with reason, come together. We can build righteous alliances, rather than making friends with an enemy's enemy. We don't have to tear each other down and the country along with us. This is my time and this is my fight; I don't mind being the trailblazer. I will not let my pedigree be questioned. I love this great nation just as much as any other patriotic American does and I have a resume to prove that.

TIME FRAME

FROM THE GOLDEN BIRD .....

TO THE TYRANTS' PREY

TO THE SOCIALIST INDIA

TO CORRUPT HINDUS

Once upon a time, India was called the Golden Bird. The world used the Silk Road to reach a nation (now called India) which was rich in civilization, culture, history, knowledge, wisdom, trade and just about everything. Over time, the looters from the Middle East, the West, and then the pseudo-Hindu socialists have done their part to damage Hindus in India.

Socialism has taken its toll on many Hindus. Under socialism, it is survival of the fittest. Under socialism, every aspect of life is corrupted, but somehow by the Grace of our "million" Gods, our religious rituals and family values have survived. I used the words "religious rituals" on purpose, I could have said religious "practices", but honestly speaking, many Hindus follow the rituals without practicing the religious teachings and somehow expect salvation. With greed and immorality at the core of socialism, their salvation is questionable. PERIOD.

Hindu teachings call for a specific route - from seeking knowledge to blissful happiness:

Knowledge should bring about humility, humility should help build character. character should bring about ability to build wealth righteously, that wealth spent on betterment of dharma brings happiness. (Dharma is living a righteous life according to the natural order from birth to death.)

Hindus are advised to follow the righteous virtues like:

Patience, Forgiveness, Humility, Non-Covetousness, Purity, Control of the five Senses, pursue Intellectual development, acquire Knowledge, seek Truth, & be Calm to be righteous.

Many Hindus today live a very hypocritical life, in direct contradiction to their religious and moral teachings. Socialism has made the government in India at all levels extremely corrupt and powerful. There is lawlessness and corruption everywhere in India. For anyone who tries to blame India's third-world status on India's predominant religion (Hinduism) must look at the socialist/communist countries in the former Soviet Eastern Bloc, South America and other Middle Eastern countries. They are also equally corrupt and lawless, even though they are predominantly under Abrahamic religions. Please do not blame India's miseries on Hinduism, because if given the right environment, Hindus can be extremely successful. Hindus in the USA are a prime example of that, they outperform all other religious groups while living lawfully and happily.

Socialism is an equal misery provider. Socialism is a disease that infects people of all races, colors, creeds, countries, and religions. Socialism takes the "human" out of humanity. Life becomes a struggle of unimaginable proportion; it becomes a dog-eat-dog fight among citizens for their survival and daily needs. Socialism is cruel: I know because I lived it, and that's what I am fighting against in the USA. My fight is for purely selfish reasons. I had a chance to escape socialism and come to the US, but my kids will have no other place to go. I don't want them to blame me for sitting idly by knowing full well where America would end up with socialism.

Continuous mocking by the biased media (both foreign and domestic) has also taken its toll on the Hindu spirit. Hindus have been made to feel stupid to believe in a million Gods, their rituals seen as superstitions, and their slow and lengthy religious life as incompatible with today's fast-paced modern lifestyle. There is an overwhelming burden on Hindu parents to focus on STEM and English education to help their children be financially successful in the global economy. But there is very little to no emphasis on using their Hindu faith to help the next generation develop their moral compass. In the absence of the moral compass, two generations of Hindus (after India's independence from the tyrannical British) have taken the short-term route to material wealth and gutted the long-term route to eternal salvation.

But there are a few Hindus who have fought and continue to fight for being righteous. Since, Hinduism is an unestablished and un-herded way of life, many Hindus, on their own, still find His messages through small instances in life. There are some gurus and modern-day researchers who are helping the new generation revive their majestic past. All the tyrants so far have looted and plundered everything material from Hindus and the Golden Bird except the immovable; the faith, knowledge and traditions are abstract, and they have survived. During the historic tumultuous times, and before socialism devoured India, Hinduism as a faith survived because of two critical Hindu traditions:

a) generations living together as prescribed by their scriptures, thus, passing on religious and family traditions generation after generation.

b) guru-disciple relationship.

Having lived under the boot of oppressors for many centuries, Hindus have failed to gain wealth to ever defend their faith. The western world came to know of a distorted view of our faith as was narrated by the media. It is similar to distortions that conservative American patriots face at the hands of the main stream media in the US.

Over time, Hindus have been beaten into submission by the tyrants, their intellectual honesty eradicated, their religious history described as "Hindu mythology”, and many Hindus are now programmed to look up to their “human masters” with a “savior complex” for satanic guidance. Many Hindus have become cowards and selfish for self-preservation.

Hindus until recently did not even have the means to research their own history. Libraries in socialist India were filled with socialist materials and revisionist history. It wasn’t until the advent of the internet and Hindus escaping India that they have started finding and disseminating the dark truth about the evil foreign influence on our faith and culture.

Many Hindus now have the tools to research conclusively their glorious contributions to the world and are trying to reclaim their rightful place in history. Some have started to feel proud of their race and ancestors (from millennia ago) who gave the concept of zero, the decimal point, and complex mathematics to the world. Their contributions to chemistry, physics, medicine, music, art, languages, religion, and numerous other subject matters provided the basis of human development.

It wasn’t until Y2K that Indians started dominating the world with their intellectual power and creating wealth for “themselves.” They save as much as they can for a rainy day. Hindus rarely share their wealth with anyone outside of their family – because history is still fresh in their minds, and they remember what it feels like not to have those few extra dollars in their pockets.

People need either financial strength to peddle influence in the media or physical strength to fight back against atrocities. Hindus until now had neither. Socialism took away their right to financial freedom, and in the absence of “the right to keep and bear arms” they became sitting ducks for radicals, criminals, and politicians. India became a third-world country with poverty reaching as far as the eye can see.

Today, most Hindus take a “situational” approach to life so that they can survive their lifespan without incidence. Many turn a blind eye to the desecration of their religion, their community, and their own motherland. They are fearful of the violent attacks against them if they dare to raise their voice in self-defense or to defend their faith.

Hindus have never come together as a group, nor will they ever build a media powerhouse for PR purposes, even to defend themselves against aggressors or hate-mongers. Hindus’ scriptural teachings focus on “self” rather than collective worship and are encouraged to be independent thinkers to find their path to Him. No two Hindus think alike, and yet they are tolerant of differing opinions and diversity of thought.

Hindu politicians both in India and throughout the world use Hindus as sacrificial lambs to appease their anti-Hindu vote banks. Political and religious persecutions of Hindus are too fresh in the minds of Hindus for them to think beyond themselves. Hindus knowingly comply with tyranny, for history has shown that defiance will not yield safety (financial or physical) for them or their immediate family.

Many Hindus today are devoid of their ancient Hindu teachings, and most in or from socialist India are making a mad dash towards the western form of materialism at all costs. The political system in India is corrupt, leaving very little room for the righteous to enjoy a good standard of living. Those who are morally corrupt and spiritually devoid seem to have a better materialistic and glamorous lifestyle. Many are drawn to that; people will go to any lengths (even selling their religion) for access to schools, hospitals, and a paycheck.

Hindu women who were once revered for turning their bodies into ashes to defend their sacred honor, are in many instances, replaced by modern Hindu women who flaunt their cleavage to invite lustful attractions. Most men, by default, are pigs who encourage such women to play dirty - all in the name of "modern women liberation." These modern westernized Hindu women play in the hands of evil men who "see when shown" and "take when given" without any morals or remorse. Abortion as a foreign concept was brought to India from the west by Margaret Sanger's organization. Thanks to the socialists, abortion which was never part of the Hindu fabric is now an acceptable practice. Many lives and families are now destroyed by lust and greed. In the name of modernism, many Hindus (including women) are adopting lifestyles they see in Hollywood and Bollywood, without ever pausing to reflect on their rich ancient values, practices, traditions and heritage.

Many Hindus have become engrossed in massaging their five senses with as many negative influences as they can. For them, satanic temptations and sensual pleasures take precedence over hard work and righteousness. There is little to no restraint on controlling the senses which are like wild horses clouding their intellect. Any action they take is driven first and foremost by - what's in it for me and my enjoyment? Thanks to the western influence of greedy materialism, many Hindus have become devoid of reality, irresponsible in carrying out their duties towards their family, honoring their parents, community and religion itself.

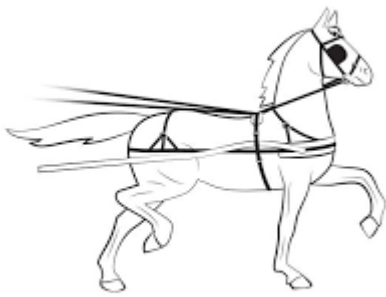

Greed is an infectious disease that is devouring Hindu values and practices. Hindus have just recently acquired the financial means to live a modern lifestyle, which they are sadly equating with living a sinful westernized life. Lust, greed, and anger due to dissatisfaction are driving them closer to the gates of hell. By adopting the leftists' negative western values, they see on TV and in pop-culture, they are contributing towards the acceleration of the dark times mentioned in our scriptures. It is detrimental to their soul and salvation, but sadly they don't care.

THE MEDIA AND THE HERDERS

Hinduism has been defined by foreigners in the modern world. Hinduism has always been a way of life, never a religion. The west called it a religion. "Hindu" in itself is a foreign word to describe Hindus. The name "Hindu" was given by Persians when they invaded our Holy Land, now called India. "India" again is a foreign name given by the British, the original name is Bharath.

Hinduism was originally called "Sanatan (~Sun-aa-ton) Dharma" (Eternal Faith). The eternal-faith can be best explained as living a life by "following the natural order from birth to death" which leads to eternal salvation. When the "natural-order" is tainted with social experimenting, it leads to a chaotic life both for the experimenter and those around him/her. Hinduism dates back thousands of years before B.C., with each time in history explained in great detail. Hinduism spread (never through brutal force or materialistic enticement) from Europe to the Middle East to China in the North and the Far East. India was the hub for knowledge, wisdom and wealth even before the Silk Road era.

The ends justify the means! Those who criticize Hinduism on any grounds must be questioned about their own motives? Are they criticizing Hinduism to keep you away from attaining ancient knowledge? What is their vested interest in preventing you from seeking this transcendental knowledge? What are they afraid of if you take the horse blinders off? Why are they criticizing Hinduism which has never been a threat to humanity? Is it to deflect scrutiny from their own murderous past?

There is not a single satanic verse in our millions of pages of scriptures or from our religious leaders from ancient Hinduism that will encourage followers to kill or hurt another human being simply because there is a difference of opinion.

Those from the west who have sought this ancient knowledge with an open mind have immersed themselves in the depths of wisdom that Hinduism has to offer. Most scholars, both western and eastern, will tell you that one life is not enough to absorb the wisdom of this ancient religion.

There are millions upon millions of verses written in various Hindu scriptures. But there are no satanic verses that talk about killing, converting, or forcing one's interpretation of God over others. Those who have studied the Hindu scriptures will tell you that cheating, lying, coveting, killing, or violence are deemed demonic in nature. There is a great amount of emphasis on "self" - not as in selfish - but focus on improving one individual - oneself. The principle of "non-violence" prevents us from harming His creation (including our own body). Our body is a temple, where He resides, and therefore must be kept free of impurities: in the form of thought, words and actions.

The power of foreign media has distorted Hinduism as some demonic religion or uncivilized tribes to help with conversions and/or the oppression of Hindus. Hindus were laughed at for their belief system to the point that many Hindus have taken refuge in their closets. They have adopted lifestyles contrary to their faith, just to fit in with the modern world. Most Hindus line up with the leftists' causes for their self-preservation or political expediency.

Conflicts amongst We the People fuel the vested interests of the media and the herders. The masses are too busy making ends meet because the government covets a huge chunk of their hard-earned dollars in taxes. The masses don't read or have the time to educate themselves, and the herders know that. Hiding behind the robe of trust, it is easy to manipulate the trusting, gullible humans.

The West could flourish with the arrival of the modern industrial era in the 19th century, while Hindus were fighting for their survival and freedom from foreign ideologies being imposed upon them. With the money and wealth of the West came the control of the media to distort Hinduism. Hindus were under British rule until 1947 and had no retaliation power against those who defined Hitler's Hakenkreuz as Swastika. The Swastika is Hindus' ancient holiest of holy symbols, but now it is linked to Hitler's quest for hatred and killings. In fact, The Hakenkreuz or Hooked Cross is a Christian symbol that became the emblem of the Nazi Party in 1920. It was Hitler who designed the flag and explained it in his biography, Mein Kampf. The media and the herders propagandized the Hooked Cross as a Swastika to successfully deflect the negative attention that Hitler brought to the Hooked Cross. Hindus had absolutely nothing to do with Hitler's hatred for Jews and the atrocities that followed under his reign, and yet the media and the herders found a way to bear false witness to linking our holy Swastika to Hitler's evil acts. Hitler was NOT a Hindu and certainly did not use any Sanskrit words in his evil manifesto - so, what was his source for hatred? Shush! Can't go there! History has been rewritten, and will stay that way.

A good example of how the media and the herders can successfully change the terminology is evident in the climate hoax. What started as a "GLOBAL COOLING" scare in the 1970s was later changed to "GLOBAL WARMING", when the data was not conducive to promote their global cooling lie. When the global warming lies failed, the media managed to change the narrative to a more neutral terminology as "CLIMATE CHANGE." So, if it is hot in summer, or cold in winter - the hoaxers can swing either way to prove their myths. They cannot accurately predict the weather for the next week and they want to predict the climate a few decades down the road? Seriously?

The climate hoax is a gateway to socialism. It is a man-made job-killing plot to make people destitute. Destitute people are easy to control. I am all for green sustainable energy but without sacrificing traditional sources. I know firsthand the disastrous effects on a country when traditional sources of energy are limited/denied to the masses. The climate hoax peddlers along with the media and the vested interests have turned believing in the climate hoax as a morally superior "religion." When the superiority complex of the followers kicks in, power is centralized, and authority established; the horse-blinders go on the duped followers; minds are closed and dissidence is not tolerated. The duped then want to convert others to their way of thinking at all costs. The duped are praised as having an independent mind to see the clothes on the naked emperor. When a realist calls out the naked emperor, he/she is insulted, character assassinated and mocked.

Mocking is a successful strategy that the evil doers use to get their way. People don't like to get mocked, and instead of fighting back for what is right they succumb to pressure. Let's take RINOs for an example. Most Republicans run in elections as conservatives saying the right things, but after getting elected they don't want to get mocked so they succumb to evil leftist/authoritarian ideology. Similarly, many Hindus have either walked away from their religion or joined the mockers.

Another good example of brainwashing is the Democrat party. Historically, Democrat party has been a party that has oppressed minorities or has been against lifting minorities out of their miserable life situations. Democrats founded the KKK, fought against the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, and instituted Jim Crow laws. Democrats were also against the 19th Amendment and tried to filibuster the Civil Rights Act in the 1960s. It was because of these events, I joined the Republican party, only to find myself in a fight of my own.

When you have the herders and the media working in tandem, Walla! the Democrats today are seen as the champion of minority rights - even though the reality remains that - women and minorities continue to suffer under the Democrat rule. My heart especially aches for the black community for the suffering it has seen and continues to bear to this day. Such is the power of the media and the herders, that the majority in the black community still cannot see what hit them. Hindus and other minorities are in the same boat.

Out of sight, out of mind! The Democrats are now removing the confederate statues and monuments from the public sphere that will remind the public of the real racist past of the Democrats. The media and the herders are cleaning and polishing the image of the cunningly receptive and an extremely deceptive Democrat party. The new converts will never know of their brutal past.

Herders on the right just like on the left build a claim (emotionally, not factually) to supremacy of one's race, color, creed, religion, and ideology and the gullible buy into it. They want to feel special for being part of the "superior club." All these stakeholders are also able to (over time) whitewash their past atrocities and present a kindler/gentler image to fool the masses. The new converts don't know the past and help propagate the superiority complex. As long as we have the masses unwilling to take the horse-blinders off, We the People will never be able to come together in peace.

The right-wing media fights the lies spewed by the left wing in the west, but relies on India's left-wing media's lies to demonize Hinduism. It helps their right-wing religious organizations raise money and push their agenda throughout the world. If there is any negative news coming out of India, the media and the herders, quickly jump to paint all Hindus with the broadest brush as being some sort of evil doers. But any bad news coming out of the Middle East or the West is somehow not related to their dominant religion or followers thereof. In fact, their followers, PR machines and media eco systems jump in high gear to make sure that their race/religion disowns it and walks away scratch-free.

The world media both on the left and the right will not present the truth to their viewers for obvious reasons. The left, of course, wants to tear down religion and the nuclear family in any shape or form, except Islam because they know what the consequences will be of going against the "peaceful" religion. The media on the right will, of course, not dare to go against their viewership, because their religious leaders want the narrative against Hinduism going. It helps them with their fundraising. Like Deep Throat said, "follow the money," the livelihood of these religious organizations depends on keeping the herd in control and Hinduism as the boogeyman.

CONCLUSION

Danger Ahead.

During my campaign, most leaders of various organizations came out against me because of my faith. To me, it is a ludicrous idea that wearing religion on one's sleeve makes him/her a better person. It is only a ploy by the wannabees/politicians to pull on the darker strings of human nature. For any independent thinker, it's a silly idea, a stupid idea, an anachronistic idea, and a dangerous idea. It is not grounded in education, wisdom, enlightenment, and open-mindedness.

When followers of a race or religion consider themselves superior to others, we end up with supremacy, Eugenics, acts of terrorism, ethnic cleansing, the Holocaust, genocides, slave ownership, plunder and deceit, bigotry, and hatred. Not to mention the "savior complex."

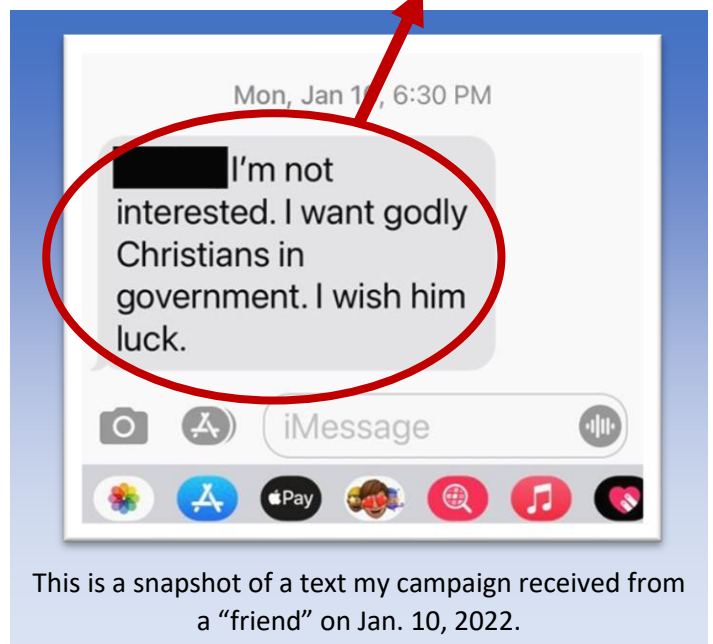

I ask you, haven't Republicans always elected Christians to represent them in the government, who they believed were "godly?" Then, how come this great nation has ended up on the brink of socialism? Don't these

slithering Republicans, cheat and lie to their voters, bear false witness for lobbyists, covet via taxes for corporations to a point that we cannot take a day off for the Sabbath? Haven't they made money and power as their gods, and "$" as a graven image tattooed in their (mis)conduct. Are they not stealing from the future generations, while dishonoring senior citizens? By the way, we can't talk about adultery or killing the innocent, can we? Let SCOTUS decide that. Do these Republicans even stand up for a country that was founded on the Ten Commandments and was written by God-loving, God-fearing Christians? And what about living up to the Laws of Nature and Nature's God that the Declaration of Independence is based upon? Ssssh!

I request you to give me a chance to unify and build alliances among people of all races, religions, colors, and creeds who believe in common morals, nuclear family values, and just laws under one umbrella, the US Constitution. I will put "constitutional consent of the governed served" in the American equation. Thank you! I rest my case!
