ARTIST BIO

Jeanne Burris Johnson makes art that earns its space—on the wall and in the conversation.

Her work pulls from photorealism, pop art, and mixed media, turning everyday moments into bold, high-contrast statements. Whether it's a tightly rendered portrait, a kiln-fired glass piece, or a collage built on irony, her work leans into precision, wit, and visual punch.

Based in Michigan, Jeanne's art has shown in juried and invitational exhibitions throughout the state, including Manifest Gallery, Detroit Artists Market, and Art Studio 1219. A former gallery director and grant recipient, she's built programs for emerging teen artists and helped launch a city-wide art event that drew hundreds.

Her pieces are in private collections across the U.S.—chosen by collectors who value work with technical range and something to say.
