Maitri Meyer (pronounced "my tree," meaning loving kindness in Sanskrit) is The Career Actualizer™ and founder of Actually Done LLC. She exists to help executives over 40 stop chasing the next opportunity and start creating the right one: Usually a final, purpose-aligned peak-career role where career and life purposes stop competing and finally converge.

Maitri brings a few things most career coaches do not: a recruiter's lens, strong business acumen, and lived career/spiritual integration. After 10+ years placing candidates across industries, she knows exactly how hiring decisions are made and holds a famously high ethical bar. If she would not hire you for the role, she will not help you pursue it. That kind of honesty tends to either weed people out quickly or create clients for life.

Her foundation spans 20+ years of global business experience across nearly every functional area, industries from solar to international trade, and 30 years of New Thought study that she credits with helping her manifest several genuinely dream jobs of her own. She has lived and worked in Japan, Poland, and West Africa. She was a digital nomad before anyone knew what to call it and currently runs her practice from a remote mountain village of Colombia, which tells you everything you need to know about how she applies her own vision to her career.

Maitri coaches seasoned professionals across the U.S., entirely remotely, through vision, strategy, and the kind of grounded, no-nonsense execution that turns a peak-career vision into reality.
