Community

The Northam Advertiser was established in 1893 providing it's residents with editorial coverage of local, state and national news.

For the first time in March 2020, the Northam community lost it's local paper to the closing down of the Avon Valley Advocate.

The Northam Advertiser is a full tabloid size newspaper, available for free to the community of the Shire of Northam printed and distributed monthly.

Contribution

With over 12K residents and 800 businesses in the Shire of Northam*, The Northam Advertiser is making a comeback and will be relying on the local community to provide the news, stories, events and offerings to keep the community engaged.

Sponsored Advertising

In order for the Northam Chamber of Commerce to provide this service to the community, sponsored advertising rates will be applied to cover the costs of editorial contribution, print production and paper distribution.
