Bio

"When life hands you vinegar and hot peppers, make great hot sauce!" That's how the oldest of three, born to a young mom has lived. From humble Chicago beginnings, her teachers, church and family helped hone her love of talking all the time, writing and performing arts. A natural born leader, she led dance crews in her youth, which is a trait that she exercises in artistic, corporate and volunteering realms.

This former bank manager and accountant knew before she finished her Bachelors in Finance at DePaul University, that she was truly an artist. So, she taught dance while on a corporate assignment in Ireland. Even while enduring hardships and working a 9-5, she produced her Hollywood award winning solo show called, "Ask A Black Woman", based off her riveting podcast and YouTube series. After her talk, you will be charged to relentlessly persist in your project, from an artist that is always producing a purposeful legacy.

Signature Topics

KILL THE CLUTTER & CREATE

How does a burned out banker become an award winning artist? She killed the clutter: mentally and physically, cultivating room for her practice to grow.

MISSION: To birth organized creators.

HOW TO MAKE IT WHEN YOU'RE BARELY MAKING IT

Limited time? Limited money? Limited support? She knows how to make a labor of love happen, when she is barely making it. She wants to show you how.
