Welcome back to the next instalment in the IDentity Property Buyers Newsletter series. Today's chat is about how to design yourself a financially free retirement whilst still in your younger years. That's not to say that it can't be done later, as it definitely can. This particular chat is aimed to try and get you to plan out your retirement well before it arrives.

Become Financially Free...

The majority of people go through life working hard for a living, spending most of what they earn and saving and putting aside very little. Now it can be extremely tough for some to be able to generate enough income to save and put some money away for later, but for many it is not impossible. There are a number of fairly simple ways which almost anyone can benefit from that will help, which will be the topic of a later issue. A smaller but still significant percentage of people go through life working hard for a living, live well and save a reasonable percentage of what they earn. Now don't get me wrong savings sitting in the bank is great, but savings alone will not get you to the point of being financially free. Especially at the moment when interest rates applied to savings are extremely low. Interest earned less tax payable will likely not even keep pace with inflation.

You're loosing money!

Now the next group of people are definitely in the minority however they are similar to the two groups above who also go through life working hard for a living, live well and try to save. They do however save a larger percentage of what they earn, but that isn't the punch line.

They invest a large proportion of those savings! Now we are not talking about get rich quick schemes, or high risk extremely volatile investments, we are of course talking about investing in low risk bricks and mortar. Investing in residential real estate is what is termed a 'Get Rich Slow' process that takes decades to build before significant gains are made and life changing results are achieved. But it is not as difficult as you may think, as small amounts of income diverted at regular intervals will soon be unnoticed and be maintaining an appreciating asset or asset base.
