Seeds from the fruit of a tree that didn't bloom,
Lucent eyelids ruminates upon lost stars of myth and time.
An offering of peace at the Altar of the Ancient Ones,
A beacon of light to guide the weary wanderer home.
The Orator spoke the Oracle's truth:
Dance on the plane that separates
Sinking or swimming or dreaming or waking.
Every moment my cells divide I am a yeast, An uni-cellular organism.
My organs are made of stars,
I am an Astral Body.

David Ullock (b.1988) is an artist and craftsman residing in Vancouver BC. His creative practice is rooted in intuition and experimentation, and exists at an intersection of fine art and functional craft. Working primarily with reclaimed wood and paint, the surfaces and textural qualities of these chosen materials guide his hand in the creation of unique abstract forms, where curved and soft edges interact with hard straight lines, connecting planes to each other in multiple angles. Undulating movements resemble shapes in nature, while ethereal figures emerge and fade with each shift in perception, allowing the viewer to experience the artworks with both a semblance of familiarity and an exquisite alienness.
