Biography

John Badwater acquired a disability in his mid thirties and went from a life of independence, with disposable income, to relying on the Disability Support Pension. His disability is dynamic, so fluctuates in severity. Facing the challenges of this kind of disability led to difficulties maintaining employment and impacted his quality of life. His career suffered several setbacks, but he was able to work in contract and part-time positions until he encountered disability discrimination, which triggered underlying health conditions. He left the workforce to establish a home based business.

John is available for in person and video link presentations that address real life issues and focus on topics relevant to the audience. Contact John directly via his website contact page for options, testimonials, availability and rates.
