About Walt Burns

Walt Burns is a Fort Worth–based photographer whose work investigates color, perception, and abstraction within the overlooked surfaces of the urban environment. Originally from Dallas and living in Fort Worth since 1997, Burns draws inspiration working within a minimalist framework. Through careful attention to color relationships, geometry, and subtle shifts of light, his photographs blur the boundary between representation and abstraction. His work is widely installed across the metroplex, including large-scale displays in office buildings and installations at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport. Burns is represented by Masure Gallery, where his work continues to explore the visual poetry embedded in the mundane architecture of contemporary urban life.

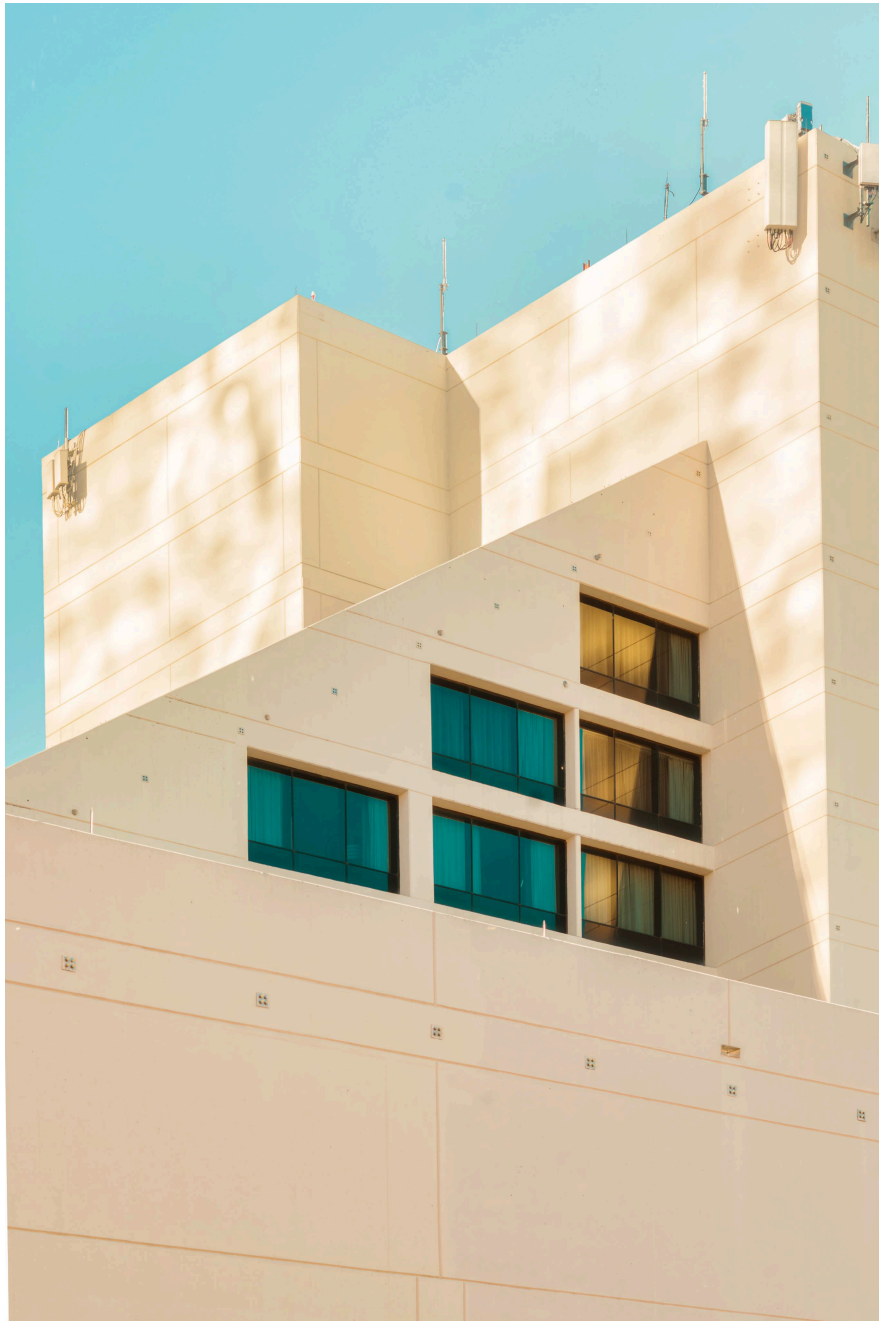

Modern Exposure

June, 6 - August 22, 2026

Curatorial Statement by Simone Fischer

Masure Gallery is thrilled to present Modern Exposure, a debut solo photography exhibition featuring photographer Walt Burns, curated by Simone Fischer. Walt Burns is a Fort Worth photographer that specializes in Architectural Minimalism photography. Burns' unique composition depicts ubiquitous cityscapes of Fort Worth, elevating ordinary scenery into novel abstractions. Burns' eye hones in on titillating compositions of historic architecture removing them from the mundane and positioning them within a contemporary framework. Burns' fresh take on Cowtown turns the conversation into ideas around expansion, color and carefully considered details.
