"For almost two decades, I have watched my design clients move from saturated color – the earth tones and whimsical accent walls – to a recent trend that I call neutral shades of gray. For this era, the shades of gray allow less focus on the walls, while the focus on individualism in design returns – with artwork, furnishings and decor details emphasized."

Minimalist and modern, the Ashford Collection from Twin Star Home can function as a media or storage cabinet. Behind the glass-front double doors is an adjustable shelf. www.twinstarhome.com

Designed by Frank Chou for HC28, the Bold armchair is characterized by audacious lines paired with a rounded, solid wood frame. Available in fabric or leather as well as multiple wood finishes. www.hc28furniture.com

Fredrick Ramond's Gigi pendant adds a touch of glam with the crystal-like steel that makes up the drum. Here the white organza shade pops against the Polished Nickel finish. www.fredrickramond.com

From Dash & Albert's new Designer Favorites Collection, the Framework rug brings a touch of traditional order and rustic, earthy charm. Inspired by menswear suitings, this low-profile floor covering features an ultra-durable, long-lasting natural sisal blend. www.annieselke.com

Modern industrial design gets softened by fine lines for the Vito bookshelf from Four Hands. Wide planks of distressed iron offer plenty of space for the display of books and treasured items. Brass-capped feet add a feminine finishing touch. www.fourhands.com

These Terrazzo sculptures from Mitchell Gold + Bob Williams have specks of gray in varying shades that catch the light and stand out against the beige coloring. www.mgbwhome.com

This side table from Jonathan Charles has a White Smoke Eggshell finish that contrasts nicely with the black, curvy legs. www.jonathancharlesfurniture.com

The varying shades and textures of gray make the mustard-colored seat of the Mix Modular sectional pop. Gus Modern's design uses eight basic components, which can be combined to create an unlimited number of seating configurations. www.gusmodern.com
