

Cerulean Wine Bar has perfect timing. The area's newest premier wine bar and event space is officially open and ready to introduce guests to a new way to "wine" down!

Cerulean Wine Bar

Cerulean Wine Bar in Midtown Auburn opened April 1st but there is nothing foolish about this new business. In fact, they said themselves the initial wine list alone took much "thoughtful deliberation."

That attention to detail can be seen throughout the charming wine bar. Twinkle lights on the patio, fresh flowers on the tables and wines you won't find anywhere else in town are but a few examples.

Like the wine they serve, Cerulean plans to get better with age. Think of it as a work in progress—making it more fun to visit again and again!

Guests will notice new personal touches and eclectic additions like local artwork as time goes on. For now, however, wine lovers and newbies alike are welcome to find a seat at the quaint indoor bar or outdoor patio. It's a first-come, first-serve situation for the time being.

The patio does include a small, covered section as well as additional open-air seating. In all, there is seating for about 50 guests.

More about your visit

Not sure what you like when it comes to wine? Luckily, once you're seated, a knowledgeable bartender will be right over to help you decide!

You can order wine by the glass or bottle. Plus, it's the only place in town with wine flights! Taste a little of that and a little of this within the same grape varieties or regions of the world.

The thoughtful folks at Cerulean have even made it easy with handy flight cards that describe the wines.

There are also a few select craft beers on the menu as well as small charcuterie boards with delicious cheeses, fruits and crackers, for example. You can also grab a bite to eat from the nearby Sword and Skillet food truck.
