

Window Cleaning Proposal

Introduction

Windows are among the first things that get noticed in a building and yet, the significance of maintaining the cleanliness of these windows may be usually overlooked. Over time, the window glasses become dull and dark due to coming in constant contact with contaminants such as oxidants, hard minerals, water, paint, Sunlight, dust, etc. The more the accumulated dust the harder it is to clean, leaving the surface prone to scratches and cracking.

Window cleaning is the job of professionals. Toting a ladder, squeegee, and heavy pail around the interiors and exteriors on a perfectly good weekend afternoon is not easy after all! Choosing the right professional will help you get the job done timely and efficiently.

TO GIVE YOU A CLEAR IDEA OF HOW WE COUNT WINDOWS.

In the picture below, this will be counted as 6 windows (including the doors). If a window is bigger than the ones shown, it is counted as 2 windows or even more depending on the size and shape.

For the glasses in a smaller pane on top or sides of a big window like the ones above, are an extra 50 cents per glass/ pane since they take longer to clean. So those top panels will cost $2.50 to be washed both inside and outside. If they are big, you might be looking at paying a bit more.

How Much Does Window Cleaning Cost?

Window cleaning cost varies depending on window size, number of panes, the degree of cleaning required, and other factors, but the typical range is $149 to $296, with the national average running about $213. As with other house cleaning duties, size is the predominant factor in pricing. The price also depends on the accessibility of the windows, the number of panes, and how dirty they are. So, you can tell that our prices are still low for now.

Number of Windows

The cost of cleaning one window ranges from $10 to $15. The average is $10 per window, based on a window size of 3 feet by 6 feet. The amount can vary not only by size but also if the window has panes, which take longer to clean. Also, if windows are on a higher floor, they are more difficult to clean and will perhaps require a lift or other equipment to reach them.
