

THE MUSEUM OF THE STAFFORDSHIRE YEOMANRY
(QUEENS OWN ROYAL REGIMENT)
AT THE ANCIENT HIGH HOUSE, GREENGATE, STAFFORD

The Museum of the Staffordshire Yeomanry is a registered charity located in the heart of Stafford at the magnificent Ancient High House in Greengate Street. The museum provides a rich history of the lives of the many men who lived, fought and died for their country. It displays an unrivalled collection of memorabilia connected with the regiment, from period uniforms, artifacts, photographs and documents. The regiment has been part of the county since it was raised in 1794 and has been active service in all major conflicts. The museum wonderfully illustrates this through its displays which help to pass on the history of the regiment to future generations.

.....

All proceeds raised from this lecture will go towards the upkeep of the Museum; if you are unable to attend the lecture but would like to make a donation, please use the enclosed form.

Ex Detective Chief Inspector Jackie Malton

.....

Ex Detective Chief Inspector Metropolitan Police and role model for award winning series Prime Suspect.

Jackie joined the police service in Leicestershire in 1970, later transferring to the Metropolitan Police. She has served most of her service in the Criminal Investigation Department, investigating all aspects of crime including armed robberies, rape, murder, fraud, arson, blackmail etc and is also a trained hostage negotiator. She served on The Flying Squad, as the only female amongst forty men investigating armed robberies.

Since leaving the Police Service, Jackie has been employed working as a story consultant on many of the major police drama's seen on TV screens, including the Prime Suspect series which was based on her experiences as a detective in the Metropolitan Police Service.

Jackie has an MSc in Addiction Psychology and for the last seventeen years has voluntarily facilitated weekly addiction groups in a men's prison, HMP Coldingley examining their addiction to drink, drugs, crime, and gambling. She is also a mentor to many lifers. Most of her work looks at adverse child experiences and core social motives relating to their social identity and addiction.

Jackie was awarded an honorary Doctor of the University by London South Bank University to celebrate her continued work in Criminology.

She was asked to present a programme 'The Real Prime Suspect' launched in September 2020 on CBS Reality, which examined in detail sixteen murders and the subsequent investigations by detectives and other experts. Each episode effects the professionalism, tenacity and the emotional impact on detectives and uniformed officers, and the evolvement of DNA and forensic science.

Jackie's memoir 'The Real Prime Suspect' was published in August 22 and describes her the struggles she faced as a gay woman in the Metropolitan Police, where sexism and homophobia were rife.