Types of employment visa in malaysia

Types of employment visas. Type of work permit in malaysia. How many types of visa are there for malaysia. Types of employment in malaysia. Types of visa available in malaysia.

Foreign workers can apply for several types of employment permits in Malaysia. The type of work permit issued by the government depends on the skill of the foreign applicant, as well as the remaining quota for that sector.

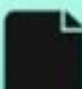

Foreign workers who wish to be employed by a company within Malaysia will have to have their application reviewed by the relevant government agencies, such as the Ministry of Manpower. The employee's sponsoring company must also work with the government to ensure that the worker is approved for entry. The Malaysian government issues these different types of work permits: Employment pass; Temporary employment pass; Professional visit pass; Digital nomad visa; and PLS&XPATS pass. Employment pass This work permit enables foreign workers to take up employment under a contract of service with an organization in Malaysia. This pass is issued to employees with specific skills, usually for technical or managerial jobs. The employment pass is classified into three categories: Category I Applicants must receive a monthly base salary of 10,000 ringgit (US$2,410) or more and have an employment contract of up to 60 months. Applicants may bring eligible dependent(s) and/or foreign domestic helper(s), subject to approval and the employment pass may be renewed. Category II Applicants must receive a monthly base salary of above 5,000 ringgit (US$1,200) and under 10,000 ringgit (US$2,410) has an employment contract with a maximum validity period of 23 months. Category III Employment pass category III is available to foreign nationals working on contracts of 12 months or less and with monthly salaries ranging from 3,000 ringgit (US$723) and under 5,000 ringgit (US$1,200). The employment pass may be renewed up to two times. Applicants are not allowed to bring dependent(s) and/or foreign domestic helper(s). Requirements to apply for an employment pass It is the responsibility of the employer to apply for an employment pass on behalf of the foreign employee.

The employer must first apply for an 'expatriate post' at one of the following government sectors: Multimedia Development Corporation - for jobs in the technology sector; Malaysia Industrial Development Authority - for the manufacturing and services sectors; Malaysian Biotechnology Corporation - for jobs in the biotechnology sector; Central Bank of Malaysia - for sectors of finance, banking, and insurance; Securities Commission - for the securities and futures market sectors; and Expatriate Committee - for sectors that are not under the above. Once the expatriate post has been approved, the employer can then submit the employment pass application to the Immigration Department of Malaysia. The employer will need to submit the following documents to the Immigration Department: The Employment Pass application form; Copy of passport; Letter of approval from the relevant authority body; Employment contract; CV and education certificates; and The employer's company profile. Temporary employment pass Malaysian companies requiring the immediate services of semi-skilled foreign workers in specific sectors can obtain a temporary employment pass, also known as a visitor's pass. The pass is valid for a period of 12 months and employers can apply for an extension on a yearly basis for up to 10 years. There are two types of temporary employment passes in Malaysia: For foreign workers in the construction, plantation, agriculture, manufacturing, and services; and Foreign domestic helpers. Further, this work permit is open only to citizens from the approved countries: Bangladesh - Only allowed to work in the plantation sector through government-to-government agreements; Cambodia; India - Citizens are not allowed to work in the manufacturing sector; Indonesia - Male citizens are only allowed to work in the manufacturing sector whereas females can work in all sectors; Kazakhstan; Laos; Myanmar; Nepal; Pakistan; Philippines - female citizens are prohibited from working in any sector; Sri Lanka; Thailand; Turkmenistan; Uzbekistan; and Vietnam. Requirements to apply for a temporary employment pass As with Employment Passes, it is the duty of the employer to apply for the temporary employment pass on behalf of the foreign applicant. The employer will also need to apply for a visa approval letter from the Immigration Department of Malaysia. The employer will need to provide the following documents to the applicant's country of origin (valid for three months): Home Affairs registration card, valid for 12 months; Home Affairs application form, completed; Recent passport size photograph; Medical certificate issued by a medical center in the applicant's country of origin (valid for three months); Foreign Worker Compensation Scheme (insurance); and An insurance policy of the Health Insurance Protection Scheme Foreign Workers (SPIKAP) (health insurance) after the visa approval letter is approved, the employee can apply for a visa with reference (VDR) from the Malaysian embassy (certain nationals do not need an entry visa). In addition to the VDR, the employee will need to obtain an Immigration Security Clearance (ISC) from an ISC center in their source country. The Temporary Employment Pass will only be issued after the employee has passed the FOMEMA (Foreign Workers Medical Examination Monitoring Agency) medical examination within 30 days of arrival.

Who is eligible? People under the following categories are eligible to apply for a Profesional Visit Pass: Islamic missionaries; Foreign artists – filming and performing; Government officials; Volunteers; International students – under industrial training or mobility program; and Other religious workers – priests, granthi, gurukul, guru dharmas (these must be at least 40 years of age). Business visas Malaysia does not issue business visas, so those traveling for business purposes can do so through a tourist visa. To apply, the applicant must show proof of having sufficient funds while in Malaysia and must possess a valid return ticket. Digital nomad visa Malaysia rolled out ASEAN's first digital nomad visa under the De Rantau program, which will be open to applicants from October 1, 2022. The program welcomes digital marketers, IT professionals, and content creators for up to 12 months' stay. Obtaining a digital nomad visa in Malaysia De Rantau is open to foreign and local digital professionals. For foreigners, they will receive a Professional Visit Pass, which will allow them to stay in Malaysia for between three and 12 months, after which it can be renewed for an additional 12 months. Types of digital nomads De Rantau aims to attract two types of digital nomads: Digital freelancer, independent contractor; and Remoter workers (full and part-time). As such, the profession of the digital nomad must be IT-related, such as software development, cloud, UX, UI, cybersecurity, AI, digital marketing, and digital creative content, among others. Proof of work Digital freelancers or independent contractors must show an active project contract with a duration of more than three months. These can be in the form of multiple contracts, and the clientele can be foreign or Malaysian companies. Remote workers, need to show an active employment contract, where the contracted period is longer than three months. The employer can be foreign or Malaysian-based. Annual income The annual income of a foreign digital nomad must be more than US$24,000, while it should be more than 36,000 ringgit (US$7,863) for local digital nomads. Application fee The application process is online and there is a fee of 1,000 ringgit (US$218) for the main applicant and an additional 500 ringgit (US$109) for each dependent they might bring. De Rantau will also certify accommodation providers that are equipped to accommodate digital nomads, such as providing fiber internet. These 'digital nomad hubs', will also include co-working spaces. New social visit pass Malaysia launched a new social visit pass named PLS@XPATS in October 2022, which allows social visit pass holders to work in the country for up to 30 days.

The nature of the work must be considered critical or urgent and is only allowed in selected sectors, such as education, construction, and manufacturing, among others. What are the permitted sectors that PLS@XPATS holders can work under? Applicants of the PLS@XPATS pass can only work under these selected sectors: Government sector; Government link companies (companies in which the Malaysian government has a controlling stake); or The private sector but under the following categories: Manufacturing; Security and defense; Oil, gas, and energy; Healthcare; Finance and banking; Construction; Information, technology, and infrastructure; Tourism; Wholesale and retail; Electrical and electronics; Business services; Aviation; Education; and Business services. Critical work criteria An essential condition for obtaining the PLS@XPATS pass is the definition of the work that is to be conducted. Foreign companies must prove that the foreign nationals they hire under this pass are conducting critical work, which is defined as emergency work, repair work, maintenance, installations, or recovery/reinstallation.
